GIRL DANCER DYING OF POISON

MacDonald Comes to N. E. Love Shrine

15c POLICE GUARD SACCO RALLY

RADICALS AID DOOMED SLAYERS

Protest meetings to save Nicola Sacco and Bartolomeo Vanzetti from the electric chair will be held in Worcester and New York tonight.

In both the latter cities radical demonstrations are planned and in each instance the demonstration will be supervised by the local police.

At Worcester a meeting will be held in Washburn Hall under the direction of Circolo Proletario, an Italian organization. This meeting will be addressed by F. Guadagni of Boston and S. Marcus of New York.

In New York three separate meetings will be held in Union square and 40 radical speakers will exhort the throngs from four separate rostrums and in six different languages. One hundred and fifty mounted police will be on duty in and about the square to prevent any violent demonstrations.

These meetings in New York are the first of a series that are planned, all aimed at the purpose of impressing Governor Fuller with the ultimate object of having him save Sacco and Vanzetti from the chair and restore to them their freedom.

At Northampton, the home-town of President Coolidge, another meeting is to be staged.

President William Allen Nelson of Smith College will preside, and the speakers will include Professor J. M. Landis of Harvard Law School, the Rev. John Whittier Darr of the First Church of Northampton, John Philip Bradley of Amherst College and Professor Elmer Barnet of Smith College.

The flood of letters and telegrams continues to avalanche into the office of Governor Fuller, though that executive has announced that he will not take up the review of the Sacco-

NEW BEDFORD GIRL, READY TO WED, DRINKS POISON, CUTS ARTERY

New York, April 16.—Mae Eccleston of New Bedford, Mass., movie actress and professional dancer, is dying at the Bellevue Hospital, where she was taken after she slashed her wrist and swallowed poison in her room at Hotel Cadillac.

The motive for the attempt at self-destruction is shrouded in mystery.

Miss Eccleston was formerly the girls' high diving champion of New England and for several years before she entered the movies she was widely known in athletic circles.

Early today attaches at the Hotel Cadillac heard the girl groaning. They entered the room and found her lying across the bed, blood spurting from a severed artery in her wrist, while on a stand, at the side of the bed, stood an empty two-ounce vial.

"I took poison! I took poison!" the girl moaned as she was being rushed from the hotel to the hospital.

At the hospital the girl refused to give the reason for her rash act.

"I'm dying! I'm dying!" she repeated constantly.

This afternoon the hospital authorities said the girl's condition was serious and that her recovery was doubtful.

M'DONALD, EX-PREMIER OF BRITAIN, VISITS N. E.

New York, April 16 (A.P.).—Devotion to the memory of his dead wife today called James Ramsay MacDonald, former Labor Prime Minister of Great Britain, to the New England town where they spent their honeymoon thirty-one years ago.

The name of the town and the hostess of their honeymoon days, now reported aged and ill, were not revealed. This was to save her from publicity. The trip will be made by auto.

Mr. MacDonald and his twenty-four-year-old daughter, Ishbel, who arrived on the Cunard liner Aquitania for a two-day stay, spent their first day in New York as guests of Miss Lillian D. Wald, head of the Henry Street Settlement House, in the heart of the Lower East Side. Miss Wald also was hostess to the MacDonalds on their honeymoon.

SHE LAUGHS AT LOVE.

FORTY ARRESTED FOR SETTING WOODS FIRES

Forty persons have been arrested and many of them convicted in court for setting fire since the present emergency arose, it was revealed today by Commissioner of Conservation William A. L. Bozeley. He estimated the fire loss at $250,000 and mounting each minute, as fires rage in virtually every section of the State.

Twenty new homes were in danger of being destroyed by a fire of several hundred acres in the Cedar Hill district of Holbrook today. Two farm buildings were destroyed and a number of other buildings in the Highland district of Lowell were menaced by brush fires.

Rain Sunday night or Monday may put an end to the forest fire menace throughout New England and allow the reopening of the woods in this State to the public.

This was the hope of tired fire-

60 Billion Population It's Time to Prepare Gov. Parker for Smith A Job With General Motors

By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1927, by Star Company, Inc.

BIKES ARE reported crumbling along the lower Mississippi, 800 are homeless in Kentucky, 1,000 in Arkansas, and rivers continue rising.

"Hold the levees at any cost," is the order sent out. Levees are makeshifts, permanent defense is needed, and it is not impossible. Great reservoirs could be planned for temporary diversion of surplus waters. Colonel William Boyce Thompson has said that modern engineering could use all surplus Mississippi waters on western desert land.

THE WORLD will need fresh water now wasted for irrigation, and rich soil now washed, millions of tons, into the gulf and the ocean, if Professor A. E. Ross of Wisconsin, learned sociologist, is accurate in his figures.

He says earth's population will multiply itself by thirty-two, by 2027. That date is onl, 100

8 KILLED IN CHICAGO EXPLOSION AND FIRE

Chicago, April 16 (A.P.)—Eight persons were killed and their bodies burned beyond recognition, and four buildings were razed, the result of an explosion, followed by fire, at West Harrison street and South Trumbull avenue early today.

The dead, members of two families, are:

Barnett Levin, 40, his wife, Rose, 40, their two sons, Albert, 20, and Leonard, 18; Harry Sokolsky, 40, his wife, Sarah, 40, a son, Samuel, 14, and a daughter, Anna, 13.

Police, the coroner's office and the fire department immediately began an investigation of the cause of the explosion, which apparently was due to the ignition of gas

Natacha Carlu and her famous husband, Jacques, winner of the 1919 Grand Prix de Rome, joined the Painters and Decorators' Union today, and lost no time taking their place alongside brethren engaged at work at the new Ritz-Carlton Hotel. By way of explanation it is stated that the gifted couple are not kalsomining or doing general paint work. They were selected to paint Paris Garden scenes on the silvered walls in the hotel lobby. They were advised to join the union to avoid the possibility of a hitch between union heads and the contractors.

RADICALS OPEN DRIVE TO SAVE DOOMED MEN

Vanzetti case until the Legislature adjourns. Most of the writers ask the Governor either to pardon the men or commute their sentences to life imprisonment, but there are many that exhort him to stand by the courts of Massachusetts and permit the law to take its course.

Meanwhile reports from Norfolk County jail at Dedham have both men apparently in the best of health and spirits, Vanzetti still eternally busy on his letter to the Governor which he hopes will be instrumental in saving himself and Sacco from the chair.

Both men eat all the meals given them, and Sacco shows no intention of taking up again the hunger-strike that he adopted in the first years of his incarceration.

MANY FAVOR CLEMENCY.

The flow of messages and petitions reaching Governor Fuller's desk from all parts of the world show no signs of diminution. The messages are divided, although the petitions and letters favoring clemency or an investigation by an impartial commission greatly exceed the number urging the Governor to carry out the law and permit the men to go to the electric chair as ordered by Judge Thayer.

J. T. Appleby of the firm of Johnson, Appleby & Co. of Cambridge, in a letter decries the large number of intellectuals who are rallying around the Sacco-Vanzetti cause.

"Heartbreaking beyond imagination," he wrote, "it is to learn of the men and women occupying high positions of learning and power who are allowing themselves to be moved by this propaganda and undercurrent of hellishness."

MINISTER HAS NEW IDEA.

The members of Newswriters' Union No. 9 of Milwaukee, Wis., petitioned the Governor to exercise clemency. Among the other messages and letters urging clemency were the following writers:

Sons of Italy Lodge, Irvington N. Y.; Cloth, Cap & Millinery Workers' Union, St. Louis, Mo.; C. P. Hopkinson and Robert W. Dixon, Brooklyn; Mrs. W. H. Nye, Clara B. Nye and Anna H. King, Chicago; Otis E. Brown, Stockton, Cal.; Edwin L. Clark, assistant professor of sociology, University of Minnesota; Lawrence Koenigsberger, Washington; George H. Sage, Dorchester; Marie Daboret, Ybor City, Fla.; Louise L. Apthorp, Cambridge.

An unusual message came from the Rev. Maxim C. Chawrisk, pastor of the All Saints' Anglican Ukranian Church of Thorold, Ont.

The minister urges the Governor not to let Sacco and Vanzetti go to the chair, but he gives an unusual reason for his request.

DEATH SENTENCE URGED.

"The blood of martyrs will be made out of these two derelicts, if they are electrocuted, and the day after their execution millions of their images will be spread throughout the world."

The Citizens' Alliance of Ramsey and Dakota counties, Minnesota, urges that the death sentence be carried out. "We have had a good deal of experience locally with Communism, particularly during the war," reads the message. "In the interest of law and order, the courts having decided that these men are guilty, for Heaven's sake let justice take its course."

Henry F. Dennison of the Dennison Manufacturing Company of Framingham petitioned the Governor for clemency for Sacco and Vanzetti.

Chaplain Alludes to Sacco Case In Senate Prayer

Reference to the Sacco-Vanzetti agitation now stirring Massachusetts was made in the prayer at the opening of the State Senate today.

The prayer was by the chaplain, the Rev. Dr. Edward D. Horton. His supplication ended with this significant plea:

"Oh, Lord, may the vigilance, the loyalty, the love of the citizenship of this Commonwealth help to protect it from perils of fire, perils of crime and from all assaulting elements, and Thine the Glory, and the Praise and the Service, Amen."

Woman Sends U. S. Flag to Fuller as Sacco Message

An eloquent though brief message on the Sacco-Vanzetti case reached the desk of Governor Fuller today. It was a small American flag.

Pinned to the flag was this note:

"This flag is Red, White and Blue—not Red."

The message was sent by Mrs. J. E. Damon of Brockton.

Socialists Demand Pardons for Sacco and Vanzetti

New York, April 16 (A.P.).—Demands for the absolute pardon of Sacco and Vanzetti and the impeachment of Judge Webster Thayer, were telegraphed to Gov. Fuller of Massachusetts after protest meetings here.

One meeting was held at Cooper Union under direction of the Socialist Party and the other was conducted by the Civic Club.

no use for cigarettes but did not disapprove their use by other girls.

She observed with Scotch canniness that she couldn't see "why girls want to spend all their money on tobacco, anyway."

Miss Ishbel scouted a suggestion of a reporter that romance might await her in America.

"But fate is strange—love is stranger—you never know when it comes," she observed after a chuckle, "nor can you plan to find—or evade it.

"Back home I have many friends—many men friends—but so sweetheart. Who can tell what will happen here?"

After their trip to New England, the MacDonalds will return to New York next Tuesday. Mr. MacDonald hopes to meet President Coolidge next week.

Mystery surrounds Ramsay MacDonald's visit to Boston which it has been reported he will make. All inquiries in circles where MacDonald is wont to move were met by denials of any knowledge of his plans today.

No reservations have been made at hotels so far as could be learned. Friends in this city say they are in complete ignorance of his plans. They admit their curiosity regarding the woman whom he is to visit in New England but deny any knowledge of her identity.

That the British statesman was to visit Boston and the mysterious woman friend was reported before he left England. He refused to tell who she was because, he said, she might be embarrassed by the publicity.

MacDonld's last visit to this country was twenty years ago. At that time he was not the great labor leader of today and his presence caused no stir.

pocket in a tailor shop operated by Levin. The Levins had living quarters above the shop, as did the Sokolskys above their dry goods store adjoining.

A theory that a still may have exploded in a grocery store operated by Andrews Cardenali was being considered after persons in the neighborhood told police that moonshine had been sold there. The gas pocket explanation, however, met with more general acceptance.

Chief Christ Peterman, of the eighteenth battalion, said that when he arrived at the scene, the fronts of the grocery and tailor shop lay in ruins on the sidewalk and in the street. He said there was a gas hole in the basement of the tailor shop, which supported the gas explosion explanation.

Besides the tailor shop, grocery and dry goods store, a building believed to have been vacant was destroyed.

Several relatives of the Levin and Sokolsky families called at the morgue during the morning hours, but none could identify any of the remains. Police finally decided it was futile to make further attempts at identification, due to the charred condition of the bodies.

U. S. SHIP FIRES ON NANKING

Shanghai, April 16 (A.P.).—Cantonese regulars, entrenched on the south bank of the Yangtse, below Chinkiang, fired on the British gunboat Woodcock today. The Woodcock replied with her 4-pounders, forcing the Cantonese out of their trenches.

Shanghai, April 16 (I.N.S.).—Once again American shells rained on Nanking today.

The U. S. S. Cincinnati was fired upon by forts near Nanking as the cruiser proceeded up the Yangtse on its way to Hankow, where a naval concentration is being effected.

The Cincinnati returned the fire with a broadside and silenced the Chinese guns. As far as reports indicate there were no casualties on the American cruiser.

U. S. Bluejacket Wounded as Chinese Fire on Destroyer

Shanghai, China, April 16 (A.P.).—An American sailor suffered a flesh wound when the destroyer Preble was fired on with machine guns yesterday from the north bank of the Yangtze, opposite Kiangyin.

The Chinese persisted in their firing until the Preble turned loose her main battery of 4-inch and 3-inch guns.

A wireless from Wuhu says Cantonese troops have occupied the American Hospital, the Tobacco Products Corporation and other foreign property, despite protests.

Miss Mary I. Craig of Philadelphia, attached to the China Inland Mission at Anshunfu, Kweichow Province, has been captured by bandits, foreign officials here are advised. She was taken near Yunnanfu, capital of Yunnan Province, while en route to Shanghai.

100 Radicals Killed in Raids at Canton

Hong Kong, April 16 (A.P.).—Fighting and shooting throughout Canton, in which about 100 Radicals were killed, were reported in a wireless from that city. The fighting is said to have occurred while Conservative forces were rounding up and disarming many Radical Unionists by orders of the Canton government.

"EX-QUEEN OF RUM-RUNNERS" AT HALIFAX

Halifax, N. S., April 16 (I.N.S.).—Mme. Gloria Casandras, once known as the "queen of the rum runners," but now referred to as "the woman without a country," arrived here today on the liner Caronia from Liverpool. She did not attempt to land and was not disturbed by Canadian immigration authorities.

She was deported here in December, after having been deported from Newfoundland. Later she was deported from England.

The Caronia sailed this afternoon for New York.

CLAIMS MARKED CARDS WERE USED TO WIN $800

Poker, not according to Hoyle, in which marked cards were used to win $800, is charged by Louis Cutler, Quincy auto dealer, in a suit today against Charles L. Hodge of that city. Cutler says Hodge won $800 "by means of marked cards and other forms of deception."

Girl-Rescuer Drowns

Camden, N. J., April 16 (A.P.).—Earl Albert, Philadelphia, lost his life today after he jumped into the Delaware River to prevent a girl from committing suicide. The girl is Kathryn Hausman, also of Philadelphia. She is recovering in a hospital.

CITIES MENACED BY BIG FLOOD

Memphis, Tenn., April 16 (A. P.)—Thousands of men, recruited from every available source, today were working hard in the greatest battle man has ever made with the Mississippi river. At least three lives have been lost.

From Southern Illinois to New Orleans, the flood menace grew to huge proportions today. Continued rains throughout almost all of the valley and in the headlands of the Mississippi's tributaries promised no surcease from the gradually mounting tide.

The Mississippi River Levee, 25 miles south of Charleston, Mississippi County, Mo., broke today and water was inundating thousands of acres.

A heavy wind, lapping over the top of the newly constructed embankment, washed out a crevasse and within a few minutes a gap 100 yards in length had been opened. Four hundred men working to hold this stretch were called to safety and no effort will be made to repair the break.

At Columbus, Ky., with water rapidly rising in the streets, only a few residents remained in their homes.

At Hickman, Ky., the flood was considered by engineers more dangerous than at any other one point.

The Mississippi, normally about one and one-half miles wide at the widest point, has spread out in many places to ten, fifteen and twenty-five miles wide.

Tributaries flowing through Arkansas have risen to gigantic proportions in many places and a number of levee breaks, together with further rains, have caused serious trouble in several places with at least three lives lost.

Most Damaging Flood of All Time, Say Experts

St. Louis, April 16 (A.P.).—Government engineers here today said the most damaging flood of all time in the lower Mississippi Valley would strike Monday, when the river would reach its crest at Cairo, Ill. The stage there today was 55.7, more than ten feet above flood level, but the city was protected by a high levee.

Engineers said the unusual condition was caused by the simultaneous flooding of the Mississippi's tributaries both above and below Cairo. They estimated the flow of the Mississippi just above Cairo would be 800,000 cubic feet a second, which would be augmented to 1,000,000 cubic feet by the waters of the Ohio.

The crest of the flood would travel about thirty-five miles a day, engineers stated, and would require a month to reach New Orleans, which is 1,240 miles from Cairo.

JAYS LINCOLN 'WOULDN'T GO TO COLLEGE TODAY'

Princeton, N. J., April 16 (A.P.).—Asham Lincoln, Thomas Jefferson, Benjamin Franklin and Grover Cleveland would never have received degrees from modern American universities in the opinion of Professor Walter L. Whittlesey, of the politics faculty of Princeton University.

"It is not very likely that Lincoln would have come to college today," Professor Whittlesey said, "or his class was too far down the social scale and the cost would have been prohibitive. Moreover, a mind like his would have outrun all bounds and been unwelcome in the average university."

The mind of Cleveland, who arrived at conclusions deliberately and well, was too slow to answer the giltiness demanded by educators today, according to Professor Whittlesey.

Jefferson and Franklin would have been "fired" early in their college careers, because they probably would not have submitted to the restraint placed upon present-day students.

BIG COMMUNAL SERVICE ON COMMON

Dawn of Easter Sunday, "the most glorious feast in the calendar of the Christian Church," will usher in a host of ceremonies with special musical programs, conducted by all churches of the Roman Catholic and Protestant sects.

One of the most interesting will be a great inter-communion observances on Boston Common at 6:30 tomorrow morning, sponsored by 17 Boston churches and numerous organizations such as the Y. M. C. A., Y. W. C. A., Camp Fire Girls, Friendly Society, M. I. T. and Radcliffe College. The service has been arranged by the Greater Boston Federation of Churches, and will have as speaker Rt. Rev. Wilbur P. Thirkield, bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, from Mexico City.

Before Bishop Thirkield's sermon, there will be singing of Easter carols led by Trumpeter Cleon Hopkins.

AT THE CATHEDRAL.

Probably its most imposing of the Roman Catholic services will be conducted at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross, when Cardinal O'Connell will celebrate a solemn pontifical mass at 10 A. M.

During this mass, a paschal candle sent to the Cardinal by Pope Pius XI, will be burned. This candle was blessed today.

PLEADS WITH COURT, BUT IN VAIN

"Aunt" Lucy Mann went "over the hill to the poorhouse," today. The little, grey wisp of a woman, who is seventy-nine years old and for years has been "Aunty" to thousands of residents of Medford, protesting to the last that she "was able to take care of herself," was taken to Tewksbury by Malden court officers, this afternoon.

"Aunt" Lucy, who comes from a proud, old Medford family, retained her gentle dignity to the end. In court, today, the officers of the government testified that "Aunt" Lucy wouldn't abide by the rules at the Medford City Home. She refused to eat the food served in the home, but left the institution each morning and returned late each evening.

It was a pathetic moment when the little, old lady, who is only five feet tall and weighs less than 100 pounds, arose to address the court in an effort to stave off the grim tragedy that she knew marked the end of the road for her.

Her shabby black dress was immaculately clean. For the moment her seventy-nine years seemed to rest lightly on her slight, stooped shoulders.

"Your honor," and the old voice trembled and quivered, "Don't send me away to the poorhouse. I'll work. I'm not too old to work. I'll do anything."

But Aunt Lucy wouldn't obey the rules at the City Home. She has no money. The poorhouse is her lot.

'Tis the Joyous Spirit of Easter

This unusual photograph depicting the "Spirit of Womanhood at Easter" was posed especially for the Boston Evening American by Miss Rose Ritchie of No. 13 Auburn street. The photograph was made by William Jones and the art work by William Woods, both of the Boston Evening American staff. Note the chaste expression of the model and the delicate touch that the gorgeous Easter lilies give to her face.

Judge Michael J. Murray, in Municipal Court today, refused to issue a warrant for the arrest of Donald S. Friede, New York publisher, who had just sold a copy of "The American Tragedy" to Lieutenant Daniel J. Hines at police headquarters.

The test sale was arranged for after a conference between Friede, Attorney Arthur Garfield Hays and Superintendent Michael H. Crowley in the superintendent's office. The book is one of those placed under the ban this week by the district attorney's office.

Judge Murray could see nothing which "would corrupt the morals of youth" in the parts of Dreiser's book which the police showed him However, the police will try again Monday morning before Judge Creed. At that time passages which have been marked in the book, but which could not be located today, will be read in an attempt to show the alleged corrupting influences.

Friede, with Attorney Hays, arrived here from New York today and went to police headquarters for the conference with Crowley. Before the conference Hays told newspaper men: "The Boston ban on books is only a part of the wave of hysteria which is sweeping the country in an attempt to make people moral by law. We intend to fight this thing through. In some parts of the country the prohibitionists are banning plays and liquor. Here their object is books."

After the test sale of Theodore Dreiser's world famous novel was made Friede announced he would stay in Boston until the case is completed. It is expected other publishers will make test cases of banned books.

ARREST 40 FOR SETTING FIRES IN WOODS

fighters today following the weatherman's forecast.

Occasional rain late Sunday is promised for southern New England and the southern Maine coast. Showers were expected late tonight or early tomorrow morning in other sections of New England, according to the forecast.

Already the fire has caused two deaths in Massachusetts, while the current loss to forest lands, farms, buildings, and cranberry bogs reaches an enormous total.

Whole armies of wearied men are fighting the flames through the day and night, the soaring blazes that roar through the forests of Maine the devastating trail of fire that menaces farms in New Hampshire and Vermont, the onrushing flames that threaten the wealth-producing cranberry bogs of Cape Cod and the factory towns of Connecticut and Rhode Island.

Wearying rune to fires caused the collapse and death of Acting Chief Battis of the West Roxbury fire station, while an eight-year-old child, Dorothy M. Clark, was killed by a street-car as she stood gazing fear-stricken at the great pall of smoke that crept over the city.

KEPT OUT OF WOODS.

In Massachusetts, state authorities sensing the danger that lies in the continued spread of the flames have taken every measure possible to check the further advance of fire.

Nobody is allowed in the woods in any section of the State, save actual owners and tenants.

And fishermen will be permitted to enjoy their favorite pastimes over the week-end, but are prohibited will lunch in the shady groves.

In addition to the danger that these parties might start additional fires, there would be grave peril that the sportsmen or picknickers might be trapped by the flames that are roaring through the woods in almost every section of the State.

In addition Fire Commissioner Hultman has ordered the revocation of all permits to build fires in back yards and vacant lots, and no more such fires will be permitted even to the holders of fire permits.

In Quincy, squads of men utterly exhausted after hours of fighting against brush fires that threatened to grow more dangerous each minute, were called from their rest as a new danger menaced them.

EXPLOSIVE ENDANGERED.

The fire was looming down upon six buildings on Sheeps Rock, where more than ten tons of dynamite is stored.

The men forgot their weariness at this new menace, and by yeoman work kept the flames from reaching their dread objective.

From Salem, Concord, Ware, North Adams come the reports of the awful ravages of the flames, the reports being the more alarming in that they contain no hope of succese from the battle against the fire. In no part of New England have the fire-fighters been able to do anything more than hold their own against the flames, the firemen being content to protect houses and farm-buildings from the flames.

In Boston alone the fire record shows 55 fires in the last 24 hours, and 89 in the preceding 48 hours, a record which the city has never before known. Practically all the calls were from brush fires or the results of brush fires.

Cape Cod is hardest hit, for there hamlets with inadequate fire-fighting force were able to call upon their neighboring larger towns for help, but so universal is the sweep of the flames today that the larger towns and cities can not spare the time nor even the men to aid the smaller villages.

The requirement that the names of competing aviators be entered 60 days in advance cannot be waived, a National Association says.

A Tale of Two Cities — To the Guillotine — By Charles Dickens

With Charles Darnay still unconscious, after he had been rescued from prison by Carton's brave act in taking his place in the cell of the condemned, Lucie, with her child and her father, sped across France toward England and safety.

Meanwhile Sydney Carton, who the revolutionists believed to be Darnay, went toward the guillotine and death. Beside him in the tumbril stood a poor little condemned seamstress, whom he comforted as they rode through the streets.

The death cart arrived at the guillotine. Carton kissed the seamstress good-by. He followed her to death, and, says Dickens, "they said of him about the city that night, that it was the peacefulest man's face ever beheld" at the guillotine.

Dickens, finishing his great novel of the Two Cities, attributes to Carton, one of his most generous characters, the words: "It is a far, far better thing I do than I have ever done; it is a far, far better rest that I go to than I have ever known."

AD REVIEW IS PRAISED BY JOHNSON

Today marks the end of the third week's competition of the Prize Review of Current Advertising, a contest to determine which advertisement is the best appearing in the Boston Evening American each week.

The competition is the first of its kind to be conducted by any newspaper. It is sponsored by the Advertising Club of Boston, and has the approval and support of educators, advertising agencies, merchants, professional and business men throughout New England and beyond.

One prominent Boston business man points out the significance of In the evening there will be a special communion service for young people and college students at 6, and the regular evening service takes place at 7.

the Prize Review as a part of a newly-aroused New England co-operative consciousness. Here is his comment on the competition:

By EDWIN G. JOHNSON
Vice-President of Boston Chamber of Commerce and President of the H. A Johnson Company of Boston

The Boston Evening American's Prize Review of Current Advertising looks good to me as it would from any business man's viewpoint, especially in these days when we hear so much about New England selling herself to the country and the world. Good advertising and plenty of it properly placed cannot help but have a stimulating effect upon New England's business, her factories, stores and business in general.

Such a contest launched by the Boston Evening American creates interest among advertisers and the reading public alike because there has been injected into it a spirit of contest competition, creating a situation in which each advertiser great or small, is something akin to a racer with the reading public in the grandstand.

A contest of this kind must, of course, be of great interest to advertisers and those who use advertising and of educational value to the students of economics and schools and colleges of Greater Boston and New England that maintain advertising courses.

New England has long been known as the manufacturing section of the country, but to retain that reputation, New England, in order to compete with the fast growing manufacturing districts of other sections of the country, must advertise.

The creation of more interest in better and more advertising through such a contest as the American's Prize Review of Current Advertising, is a big step in this direction and is worthy of commendation.

Friendly rivalry among advertisement creators grows keener with each week of the Review. A corresponding increase in the interest of readers is noticeable.

The Board of Judges welcome such public interest and urge readers of the Boston Evening American to write and tell them which advertisement seems best and why. These opinions may be addressed to the Board of Judges in care of the Boston Evening American.

'FLESH TORTURERS' REACH CLIMAX IN CRUCIFIXION

Santa Fe, N. M., April 16 (A.P.)—The ceremonial of the Penitentes, eccentric cult of "flesh torturers," which had its origin in Europe in the Middle Ages, has ended after three days of self-inflicted punishment. Penitent leaders from northern New Mexico and southern Arizona started the ritual in preparation for the climax yesterday—Good Friday—when "El Cristo" was crucified.

"El Cristo" is represented by a cult member chosen in advance, the highest honor possible for a Penitente.

The chosen one is tied to a cross and remains two hours or more, after which he is taken down for a general celebration. The hilltops are studded with crosses.

Fundamental is the belief that sin can be expurgated by physical suffering and followers subject themselves to ingenious devices for inflicting extreme pain.

The most common is the use of a braided rope of soap weed, the end of which is a ball of cactus needles, used as a whip with which the Penitents lashes himself while dragging a heavy cross of wood.

To increase the suffering a large cross-shaped gash is cut between the shoulder blades.

M. Johnson told the Pennsylvania Academy of Science in an address at its convention here today.

Dr. Johnson, who experimented in the measurement of sleep with 16 students as volunteer subjects, said an analysis of the records showed that each student changed his position on an average of 35 times a night.

HAVE CONTEST LETTER IN BY THURSDAY

By THE CONTEST EDITOR.

The Boston Evening American's "Who's Who in the Movies" competition comes to an end with the appearance of today's problem-picture, No. 24.

There may be a clue to the last "answer" you are to write in the suggestion that you have correctly identified every one of the twenty-four plays and every one of the twenty-four players. Very likely you have. It is not impossible, and on the other hand

You now have until midnight on next Thursday, April 21, to get your set of pictures, and the contest letter, to the office of the Contest Editor.

On the front of your parcel, in the upper right hand corner, write your own name and address. Give the address in full. Then address the packet to:

CONTEST EDITOR,
BOSTON EVENING AMERICAN,
P. O. BOX 110,
BOSTON, MASS.

Be sure that sufficient postage, that is, apply postage stamps enough to bring the parcel to this office. Explain to the clerk at the Post Office that you are sending FIRST CLASS MAIL. A packet of this sort must be paid for as if it were a letter, must be mailed at "letter" rates. This is most important because if you do not use sufficient postage your parcel must be returned to you.

300-WORD LETTER.

This contest having been an "easy" one, as all appear to be agreed, your chief contest interest for the next few days should be giving the necessary amount of attention to your letter on "My Favorite Motion Picture and Why It Is My Favorite."

That letter must be mailed with your 24 contest pictures.

Keep it within 300 words and in its writing be yourself. The book publishers may be looking for new authors of possible best sellers, but all that these contest judges will be hunting for will be originality. They will be glad to come upon letters possessing the virtue of helpfulness. They will be overjoyed if they discover a thought likely to be of benefit to producers, distributors or exhibitors of motion pictures.

DEADLINE 12 P. M. THURSDAY.

The task of checking answers will begin next Friday morning. As soon as is possible after that date, April 22, the Boston Evening American will print the names and addresses of the winners of (1) the Caribbean tour for two, on one of the ships of the United Fruit Company; (2) a new Ford touring car; (3) a Browning-Drake radio set; (4) a Gray Line motor tour for two persons; (5) a Metropolitan Theatre season ticket; (6) a Loew's State Theatre season ticket and (7) a Loew's Orpheum Theatre season ticket.

So little remaining to be done by contestants there would appear to be no good reason why parcels should not be mailed on time. They MUST reach the office of the Contest Editor before midnight on Thursday, April 21.

years away, and when it rolls swiftly around—some children living will see it—the population of the world will be sixty billions, instead of one billion nine hundred millions, as at present.

THOSE FIGURES are based on the fact that life lasts longer, plagues and famines no longer rage over the earth, even war is milder, since women, children and prisoners are no longer massacred.

The figures need not frighten us. "God does not let trees grow into the heavens." Texas alone could feed the earth's present population, with intensive cultivation, and have much left over. But 60 billions, and later 100 billions, of human beings will need plenty of fertile ground, and governments should begin to get it ready.

JOHN M. PARKER, ex-Governor of Louisiana, who fought and defeated the Ku Klux Klan at Mer Rouge, is out for Governor Smith of New York for Democratic candidate in 1928.

Mr. Parker says, "The South will swing into line for Governor Smith," and gives him unqualified indorsement as the best possible Democratic candidate.

AT THE SAME time a poll on Coolidge and the "third term" results, as it should, in the overwhelming opinion that there is no "third term" at issue. The poll decides that fighting out an unexpired term, due to death, is not a "Presidential term." It is the election that counts, of course.

It looks like "Al against Cal," a Coolidge-Smith battle in 1928.

ALFRED P. SLOAN, president of General Motors, and Pierre S. Dupont will be inundated by applications from young gentlemen that would like to "grow up with the business" when the new plan is announced for a second managers' securities company.

General Motors would supply cash to buy $35,000,000 worth of common shares before the end of 1930, and junior executives of General Motors would share the profits on this purchase.

The idea is not philanthropy, but a desire to interest junior executives, personally and intensely, in General Motors' earnings.

SUCH A PLAN was started in 1923 for the General Motors' senior managers. The managers' securities company, started four years ago with $33,750,000, is now worth $150,000,000.

THAT ONE profit-sharing idea in four years has been worth over $116,000,000 over and above their salaries to the senior managers of General Motors. That makes it worth while to work, and undoubtedly helps to explain the extraordinary profits and rapid success of the General Motors Corporation. Give your employes a share in the profits if you can. They may love you, but they love themselves more. That is human nature.

NEWS FROM China will grieve our Bolshevik brothers. They fight each other here and there, but the Chinese seem to have agreed on one thing, that they don't WANT Bolshevism.

Groups of "Reds" are broken up, their arms seized, unions forbidden. Bolshevists might have known that there is too wide a gap between Confucius and Lenin. And for many centuries the Chinese have practiced thinking with Confucius.

A nation, like an individual, forms thinking habits. You cannot change them suddenly.

NOTICE ONE thing about Mussolini, whether you like his absolute power or not. He keeps Italy on her feet financially. Italy is poor, but the lira is now worth more than 6 cents. France is very rich, yet the franc, originally of more value than the lira, is worth less than 4 cents.

Mussolini, who says: "I refuse to be assassinated," also says, "I refuse to let the lira collapse." He is NOT assassinated, and the lira does not collapse. There is will power and efficiency, so far.

TO KEEP well, WALK. Edward Payson Weston, eighty-seven years old, knocked down by a taxicab and thought to be fatally injured, is well again, and will walk to church tomorrow.

All his life he has been a walker, the world's champion walker, in fact. He has kept his backbone erect, his body well shaken up, his whole physical machine constantly and normally exercised.

A CHANCE MEETING—Rosalind was about to reply when her startled eye caught a glimpse of Roger. Manton's car had been halted by traffic. Young Hope was standing in a nearby doorway, lighting a cigarette. Rosalind clutched Manton's arm fearfully. She dared not think of another encounter between Roger Hope and Manton. Rosalind saw Roger dash into a taxicab. Was he going to follow them? Her heart pounded wildly, and she sat, tense and rigid, waiting.

AN UNWILLING KISS—Manton's car leaped ahead. Rosalind sat still, clutching his arm. Manton interpreting this as a gesture of affection, leaned toward her, and gently started to remove her glove. "You do love me," he said, "and you must accept my gift now!" Rosalind attempted to withdraw her hand. Manton clung insistently to her wrist. Fiercely his hot lips sought hers and clung there desperately. . . .

SHE ESCAPES MANTON—Rosalind, struggling instinctively, fought to free herself. But Manton held her closer. As the car stopped again Rosalind broke away. Manton hastened to apologize. "You are not angry with me, are you, child?" he asked in feigned surprise. Rosalind faced him furiously. Her fumbling fingers unlatched the door and she fled from the car.

THE OTHER WOMAN AGAIN—She was burning with a fierce resentment. Turning back to Manton, she cried: "Don't you dare follow me!" She rounded the corner of a side street just in time to see Roger alighting from his taxi. All her terror dropped from her at the sight of him. A great relief surged over her . . . "Roger," she called, but her words fell on empty air. For as Rosalind called to Roger she saw him turn to meet another woman. Her heart pounded. It was the mysterious girl again. (Continued Monday).

EARL CARROLL IS RECOVERING, SAY DOCTORS

Greenville, S. C., April 16 (I.N.S.).—Emerging periodically from the "psychic coma" that has enveloped him 72 hours, Earl Carroll was on the road to recovery today, his physicians said.

The New York theatrical producer, who collapsed here en route to the Federal prison in Atlanta to serve a year and a day for perjury growing out of his famous "bathtub party," thinks he is in the Atlanta prison.

This was revealed by Carroll's mumblings while he was in a semi-conscious state, according to relatives at his bedside.

Carroll is being held as a Federal prisoner in the City Hospital until his physical condition permits his removal to the Atlanta prison, according to Deputy Marshal John Pinkley, who remains near the patient. He cannot be removed in less than a week or ten days, according to physicians.

Mrs. Marcelle Carroll, the producer's wife, who came here from New York when she learned of his collapse, today was almost recovered from the severe cold which forced her to bed upon her arrival. She was up and about today and went to her husband's bedside.

BETTY ALDEN'S COMMENT ON BOSTON SOCIETY HAPPENINGS

King Horse Will Reign Monday and Tuesday at the New Riding Club on Hemenway Street

VERILY THE HORSE IS KING, AND ALL SOCIETY HIS satellites. For the Smart Setters with the inclination and leisure there's a royal round of their favorite sporting events immediately to come. Monday and Tuesday the New Riding Club intrigues locally, to be climaxed later by the United Hunts Meeting, the Brooklyn Horse Show and the Grand National Point-to-Point. And if this were not sufficient to surfeit the most ardent, there's the running of the Maryland Hunt, in addition. The Maryland Hunt on April 30, the Point-to-Point on the 23d, the Brooklyn Show starting on the 26th and the United Hunts dated April 21 and 23, thus reads the sports calendar.

THE UNITED HUNTS AND THE BROOKLYN SHOW BRING OUT the sporting set from hereabouts—and call immediately to mind such names as Henry G. Vaughan, Master of Hounds for Norfolk, and John R. Macomber of the Eastern Horse Club. And, primarily interested in racing as they are, the Myopians could have no more representative members "up" in the United Hunt than Bayard Tuckerman and Alvin Sortwell. And it may well be that Mr. Tuckerman will continue his journey afield as far as Maryland and the Green Spring Valley and its famous and furious and hazardous Grand National Point-to-Point.

LAST YEAR HE WAS, SO I BELIEVE, THE ONLY NEW ENGLANDER to ride in the steeplechase. And Imperator was his mount. Should he go down to Baltimore this season there'll be at least a trio of prominent Bostonian on hand to wish him well in this most famous of American events, for Messrs. B. Nazon Hamlin, Samuel Endicott Peabody and Linzee Weld plan to go down. Society about the Green Spring Valley —and it is Maryland's best and bluest—makes much of the social side of this fine fixture, and entertains royally.

QUITE A FEATURE OF THE RIDING CLUB'S TWO SHOWS IS the anticipated appearance of Miss Eleonora Sears in the ring, riding her own entry. Superbly at home in the saddle, Miss Sears is as supremely mistress of the reins as she is of the racquet or the golfing iron. Miss Jessie Bancroft, promising equestrienne of the younger set, will give a spirited tanbark performance. Likewise the still younger element, as represented by Miss Anna Danforth. Miss Bancroft shows "Brilliant Crest" at the Riding Club, and one of Miss Danforth's mounts is named "Rolling Over."

SMART YOUTH OF THE TOWN WHO'LL HELP "BOB" SANDERSON fittingly celebrate his farewell-to-single-blessedness dinner this evening are Warren Bryant and Alfred Tuckerman. Mr. Sanderson gives his dinner at the smart rendezvous of the elect, the Tennis and Racquet Club in New York, just one week before he and Miss Lilian Heddon exchange their marriage vows at the edifice that rears its churchly height at Park Avenue and 34d Street. Mr. Sanderson, bridegroom-elect, is a brother-in-law of the former Boston girl, Miss Rosanna Fiske, now Mrs. Lloyd Sanderson, Jr., of New York and Seabright, N. J.

"FRIENDS AND STILL MORE FRIENDS" IS THE MOTTO THE Soldiers and Sailors' Club wishes to make come true during the next few weeks, and to that end institutes a campaign that opens most auspiciously next Thursday. Then, at the Hotel Statler, an enormous company, hundreds strong, gathers for luncheon. Mrs. Gerald A. Brameell is the energetic chairman of arrangements. She and Mrs. Walter Pratt, Mrs. Charles F. Greenough, 2d, Mrs. Barrett Wendell and others of the elect are enthusiastic club sponsors and put the shoulder to the wheel with utmost energy whenever club doings are afloat.

THE CENTRAL FIGURE IN SOME PRETTY PRE-NUPTIAL entertainment is Miss Eliza Bacon, daughter of the Francis W. Bacons of Brookline, who give a bridal dinner for their pretty daughter this evening. It is to be at their home in Addington road, and preceded by two days the ceremonial itself whereby Miss Bacon becomes Mrs. Hugh Deane McKinnon, wife of a young Chicago man. A shower for the bride, earlier in the week, was a gaily informal celebration, strictly feminine in character. The wedding is to be celebrated on the afternoon of Monday, at 4 o'clock.

FRANCIS W. BACON, JR., HARVARD, 1923, IS TO BE MR. McKINnon's best man, and as the wedding is a small and intimate home affair there are but 3 ushers—Messrs. Herbert Lee Winburt, of Schenectady and Morgan A. Collins, Jr., of Boston. Mrs. Milton Baldridge (Doris Bryant) with Mrs. Philip Camp of Buffalo and Miss Ellen Whitridge of Baltimore are the bride's attending trio, the latter named as the matron of honor. The newlyweds are to live in Pittsburgh.

THE MOST JOYOUS OF WELCOMES AWAITED THE FREDERICK Silsbee Whitwells when they arrived in town a few days ago after a long foreign sojourn. With friends of place and influence in British and Continental capitals, the Whitwells ever find foreign life much to their liking and have been putting in a protracted season abroad, staying for the most part in Paris, where they had an apartment in the Hotel d'Iean, right in the heart of the American colony of the French city. The Whitwell town house here is in Marlborough street and there is a pleasant Summer place at Osterville on Cape Cod.

MRS. RANDOLPH MORGAN APPLETON'S DEPARTURE FOR the other side tomorrow takes abroad still another member of this well-scattered family. Mrs. Appleton's daughter and son-in-law, the Charles Sumner Birds, Jr., have been in Ireland with the Meath Hunt. Also was James W. Appleton, Myopian M. F. H. So also are, or will be, Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Wolcott, another daughter and son-in-law of Mrs. Appleton. Bective House in Meath is the happy hunting rendezvous for many Bostonians of the sport set, and they are going over with delightful frequency.

MISS NANCY OLNEY, SLATED FOR COMING-OUT HONORS IN the next season, came home from Europe on the Aquitania just a day or so ago in company with her father, Richard Olney, and her sister, Miss Constance Olney. According to present plans, Miss Olney makes her bow on November 10, at a tea given at the Fairfield street home. The Aquitania, by the way, brought in a whole shipload of celebrities—of the sort whose daily doings are minutely recorded in the press and read with deepest interest.

Editorial Wins Thanks of Chicago Mayor

The following telegram was received from Mayor William Hale Thompson of Chicago today:

"Editor Boston American:

"MY attention has just been called to the copy of your most complimentary editorial regarding myself as mayor of Chicago and the American principles for which I fight. I want you to know my deep appreciation.

"We are having Chicago Tuesday night, five hundred strong, representatives of business, professional and laboring men, for a waterway cruise on a Mississippi River steamer from Cairo, Illinois, to New Orleans, known as the victory waterway trip in celebration of our successful fight for Federal legislation to make Chicago a seaport via the Mississippi to the Gulf of Mexico.

"Extensive arrangements are being made by Mayor O'Keefe of New Orleans for our entertainment and the proper celebration in which the people of several Southern States are joining hands during our two-days stay in New Orleans, from April twenty-fourth to twenty-sixth."

"A SMACK I'LL GIVE YOU, LOOY."

Looy's always doing something wrong—he can't help it! But that drives no difference to mamma when she tries to square things. Poor Mrs. Feitlebaum has a hard life with "Looy, doc dope," and Milt Gross has a million and one laughs in his latest comic strip. Watch for Looy in the American on Monday.

Sacco Explains Why He Is a Socialist

By FELIX FRANKFURTER
CHAPTER VIII.
Cross-examination of Sacco

Q.—Is your love for the United States of America commensurate with the amount of money you can get in this country per week?

A.—Better conditions, yes.

Q.—Better country so make money, isn't it? A.—Yes. . . .

Q.—Is your love for this country measured by the amount of money you can earn here? . . .

A.—I never loved money.

Q.—Is standing by a country when she needs a soldier evidence of love of country.

Jeremiah McAnarney.—That I object to, if your Honor please. And I might state now I want my objection to go to this whole line of interrogation.

The Court.—I think you opened it up.

Jeremiah McAnarney.—No, if your Honor please, I have not.

The Court.—It seems to me you have. Are you going to claim much of all the collection of the literature and the books was really in the interest of the United States as well as these people and, therefore, it has opened up the credibility of the defendant when he claims that all that work was done really for the interest of the United States in getting his literature out of the way?

Jeremiah McAnarney. — That claim is not presented in anything tantamount to the language just used by the Court, and in view of the record as it stands at this time I object to this line of inquiry.

The Court.—Is that not your claim, that the defendant, as a reason that he has given for going to the Johnson home, that they wanted the automobile to prevent people from being deported and to get the literature all out of the way? Does he not claim that that was done in the interest of the United States, to prevent violation of the law by the distribution of this literature? I understand that was the—

Jeremiah McAnarney.—Are you asking that as a question to me?

The Court.—Yes.

Jeremiah McAnarney. — Absolutely we have taken no such position as that, and the evidence at this time does not warrant the assumption of that question.

The Court.—Are you going to claim that what the defendant did was in the interest of the United States?

DEFENCE OBJECTS

Jeremiah McAnarney — Your Honor please, I now object to your Honor's statement as prejudicial to the rights of the defendants and ask that this statement be withdrawn from the jury.

The Court.—There is no prejudicial remark made that I know of, and none were intended. I simply asked you, sir, whether you proposed to offer evidence as to what you said to me.

Jeremiah McAnarney.—If your Honor please, the remarks made with reference to the country and whether they are or are not the thing were for the benefit of the country, I can see no other inference to be drawn from those except prejudicial to the defendants.

The Court.—All I ask is this one question, and it will simplify matters very much. Is it your claim that in the collection of the literature and the books and papers that that was done in the interest of the United States?

Jeremiah McAnarney.—No, I make no such broad claim as that.

Mr. Katzmann.—Well, he (Sacco) stated in the direct examination yesterday that he loved a free country, and I offer it to attack that statement made in his examination by his own counsel.

The Court.—That is what I supposed, and that is what I supposed that remark meant when it was introduced in this cross-examination, but counsel now say they don't make that claim.

Mr. Katzmann.—They say they don't make the claim that gathering up the literature on May 5th at West Bridgewater was for the purpose of helping the country, but that is a different matter, not released (sic) to May 5th.

The Court.—I will let you inquire further first as to what he meant by the expression.

Mr. Katzman—What did you mean when you said yesterday you loved a free country? A.—Give me a chance to explain.

SACCO EXPLAINS

Q.—I am asking you to explain now. A.—When I was in Italy, a boy, I was a Republican, so I always thinking Republican has more chance to manage education, develop, to build some day his family, to raise the child and education, if you could.

But that was my opinion: so when I came to this country I am there was not what I was thinking before, but there was all the difference, because I been working in Italy not so hard as I been work in this country. I could live free there just as well. Work in the same condition but not so hard, about seven or eight hours a day, better food. I mean genuine.

Of course, over here is good food, because it is bigger country, to any those who got money to spend, not for the working and laboring class, and in Italy is more opportunity to laborer to eat vegetable, more fresh, and I came in this country. When I been started work here very hard and been work thirteen years, hard worker, I could not been afford much a family the way I did have the idea before. I could not put any money in the bank: I could not push my sons to go to school and other things. I teach over here men who is with me.

The free idea given every man a chance to profess his own idea, not the supreme idea, not to give any person, not to be like Spain in position, yes, about twenty centuries ago, but to give a chance to print and education, literature, free speech, that I see it was all wrong. I could see the best men, intelligent, education, they been arrested and sent to prison and died in prison for years and years without getting them out, and Debs, one of the great men in his country, he is in prison, still away in prison, because he is a Socialist.

He wanted the laboring class to have better conditions and better living, more education, give a push his son if he could have a chance some day, but they put him in prison. Why? Because the capitalist class, they know, they are against that, because the capitalist class they don't want our child to go to high school or college or Harvard College. There would be no chance, there would not be no,—they don't want the working class educationed; they want the working class to be a low all the time, only to underfoot, and not to be up with the head.

So, sometimes, you see, the Rockefellers, Morgans, they give fifty,—I mean they give five hundred thousand dollars to Harvard College, they give a million dollars for another school. Everyday say, "Well, Mr. Rockefeller is a great man, the best man in the country." I want to ask him who is going to Harvard College? What benefit the working class they will get by those million dollars they give by Rockefeller, D. Rockefellers.

WANTS NO WAR

They won't get, the poor class, they won't have no chance to go to Harvard College because men who is getting $21 a week or $30 a week, I don't care if he gets $50 a week, if he gets a family of five children he can't live and send his child and go to Harvard College if he wants to eat everything nature will give him.

If he wants to eat like a cow, and that is the best thing but I want men to live like men. I like men to get everything that nature will give best, because they belong—we are not the friend of any other place, but we are belong to nations.

So that is why my idea has been changed. So that is why I love people who labor and work and see better conditions every day develop, makes no more war. We no want fight by the gun, and we don't want to destroy young men. The mother been suffering for building the young man.

Some day need a little more bread, so when the time the mother get more bread or profit out of that boy, the Rockefellers, Morgans and some of the peoples, high class, they send to war. Why? What is war? The war in hot shoots like Abraham Lincoln's and Abe Jefferson, to fight for the free country, for the better education to give chance to any other peoples, not the white people, but the black and the others, because they believe and know they are mens like the rest, but they are war for the great millionaire.

No war for the civilization of men. They are war for business, million dollars come on the side. What right we have to kill each other? I been work for the Irish. I have been working with the German fellow, with the French, many other peoples. I love them people just as I could love my wife, and my people for that did receive me. Why should I go kill them men? What he done to me? He never done anything, so I don't believe in no war.

destroy those guns. All I can say the Government put the literature, give us educations.

I remember in Italy, a long time ago, about sixty years ago, I should say, yes, about sixty years ago, the Government they could not control very much those two —devilment went on, and robbery, so one of the government in the cabinet he says, "If you want to destroy those devilments, if you want to take off all those criminals, you ought to give a chance to Socialist literature, education of people, emancipation. That is why I destroy governments, boys." That is why my idea I love Socialism. That is why I like people who want education and living, building, who is good, just as much as they could. That is all.

Q. And that is why you love the United States of America? A. Yes.

Q. She is back more than twenty centuries like Spain, is she? A. At the time of the war they do it.

NEED MEN FOR BIG JOBS, SAYS E. A. FILENE

Modern business is greatly in need of competent executives, stated Edward A. Filene of Boston, addressing the members of the Eastern Commercial Teachers Association at the final session of their three-day convention in the Statler Hotel today.

Pointing out that the customary business training of today is created to meet present needs rather than the vastly more complicated needs of the immediate future, the Boston merchant called for a greater attention on the part of educators to training students for big jobs rather than little ones, as is now the general practice.

BETTER MEN NEEDED.

"At present in most businesses the executive positions are largely filled by promotion, but for lack of adequate basic training of those promoted, it results in many of the executive positions being filled by men and women whose power lies chiefly in their acquired technical knowledge of the job, but who govern all their work by opinions instead of by objective thinking," he said.

"They repeat the same mistakes over and over again, especially if, as is usually the case, the new test is camouflaged by apparently different conditions. Such employes are seriously handicapped by lack of basic knowledge and by not having learned the methods of objective investigation and analysis.

"Commercial education should teach business men and women the value of relating their work and their business to the general social welfare.

BUSINESS OF THE FUTURE.

"The successful businesses of the future will be those which improve the processes and reduce the costs of production; rid distribution of its present indefensible wastes, bring the prices of the necessities of life lower and lower, reduce the hours of labor and enlarge the margin of leisure, eliminate periodic depressions and recurrent unemployment, create better and better working conditions, pay higher real wages and increase the prosperity of both their employes and customers."

Dr. Augustus O. Thomas of Augusta, Me., State commissioner of education for Maine, spoke on business training as a basis for a successful professional career.

DENNISON CO. TO ERECT NEW BUILDING AT PLANT

Marlboro, April 16 (I.N.S.)—To those who doubt the future prosperity of New England Henry S. Dennison, president of the Dennison Manufacturing Company of this city and Framingham, handed a setback today, when he announced that his company would erect 39,000 feet of additional floor space within a short time.

The addition of the new building to the present plant of the company here will provide employment for over 100 hands, it is predicted. The Dennison company Marlboro plant now employs about 350 hands. The new building will be devoted entirely to the manufacture of paper boxes and will increase the company's output about 100 per cent.

NORWOOD MAN OUT OF WORK ENDS LIFE BY GAS

Rahway, N. J., April 16 (I.N.S.) —Turning on the gas in desperation over the loss of his position, Frank P. Mollison, 45, is dead today.

William Coffey, proprietor of the house where Mollison lived, told the police that the dead man had a wife and three children living in Nicholas street, Norwood, Mass., and that he told him a few days ago he intended to jump a boat en route to Boston.

Final Bid 3C..... Played by North

Yesterday's Hand as Played by Mr. Whitehead

Salient Points of the Bidding

North holds a strong original bid in any position, a suit bid preferably to No Trump because of his worthless singleton. In line also with what is now recognized as the best practice, he bids his four-card Major suit in preference to his five-card Minor. Although South has assisted his Heart bid, North, on the second round, shows his Clubs, because with Spades adversely called and assisted, he realizes that he will be compelled to trump, and cannot afford a force with a suit of four Hearts, unless South also holds four. As South holds but three Hearts, he heeds North's warning and does not return to Hearts, though holding two honors in that suit.

Salient Points of the Play

Trick 1. West plays his Queen to show the Jack, so that East will continue with a low Spade in order to prevent the establishment of the ten in Dummy.

Tricks 6 and 8. North does not lead out all his Hearts, but quite correctly utilizes two Hearts in Dummy as entries for the lead of Diamonds twice up to the Minor tenace of that suit in his own hand, as his only hope for game.

PAN-AMERICAN FLIERS OFF FOR PORT-AU-PRINCE

Santo Domingo, April 16 (A.P.).—The Pan-American squadron of the United States army left here at 10 o'clock this morning for Port-Au-Prince, Haiti, about 200 miles westward.

Before the fliers took off to continue their homeward voyage President Vasques of the Dominican Republic made a 20-minute flight as a passenger in the plane New York which is in charge of Major Herbert A. Dargue, flight commander.

GRAY IN SWOON AS SANITY IS TESTED

New York, April 16.—Henry Judd Gray collapsed today while being taken from his cell in Queens County jail for further examination by alienists seeking to determine his sanity.

He wilted in the arms of his jailers and it was necessary to carry him up stairs to the county clerk's office, where sanity tests are conducted.

Weak from lack of nourishment—he has been unable to eat for two days—he begged the alienists to be lenient with him.

"Please go easy," he said. "I'm all in."

Gray's condition aroused conjecture as to whether he would be able to go on trial Monday with Mrs. Ruth Brown Snyder, with whom he is accused of killing Albert Snyder, art editor.

Gray apparently does not care. He is reported to have expressed the desire to go to the electric chair and "have it all over."

Whether the alienists find him sane or insane, it was considered likely he will go on trial, his condition permitting.

A reference to Gray as "a fine, cultured fellow," made by Dr. Sylvester Smith, one of the State alienists, was taken as an indication that he at least, would find the statesman sane. They expect to report tonight.

Final preparations for the trial were made today. It was announced that for the first time in the history of Queens County the jurors will be guarded and shut off from all communication.

Eight Belgian Miners Killed

Mons, Belgium, April 16 (A.P.)— Eight miners were killed in an explosion of fire damp today in the Levant De Mons mine at Estinnes, ten miles from Mons. Twelve men were seriously hurt.

STAGE AND SCREEN

Samuel Knows His Groceries.

In "Pickwick," at the Majestic, that shrewd oddity, Sam Weller, carries on undiminished with all his great powers of observation. As witness his remark over the Dingley Dell cold cuts: "Tongue!" muses Sam, "a very good thing when it ain't a woman's."

The Villain Still Pursues.

Oscar Raglan, the elongated Algerian villain with Fred Stone in "Criss Cross" at the Colonial, has an unbroken record of ten years of stage dirty work in the interest of Mr. Stone's more comical arts. Raglan is still awaiting his first winning bout with his employer.

DRAMA RESUMES WITH A RUSH---SHARPLY ACCELERATED BY THE JOYOUS EASTERTIDE

MERELY SHOWING how Charles Winninger will tackle the job of supporting the nimble English star, Beatrice Lillie, in "Oh Please," the new musical comedy which re-opens the Tremont on Monday.

LOIS BENNETT will lift a high, clear voice at the Plymouth in the Gilbert and Sullivan opera company opening tonight.

THE PIED PIPER of the Mason and Hamlin is Glen Anders, the guest whose music attracts a paying guest to the house. You know that the pompous individual is a guest by his luggage. His spats indicate his ability to pay. Scene from "The Constant Nymph" (Hollis).

NAZIMOVA, emotional actress extraordinary, comes to Keith's for Easter Week with her company in a highly dramatic one-act play by Edgar Allen Woolf.

THE FAT BOY, he of celebrated somnolence, is caught in a moment of extreme wakefulness during this scene from "Pickwick," the Dickens dramatization coming Monday to the Majestic. Maxine Fomada and Marie Paxton.

ABSTINENCE ENDED; NOW FOR SOME FUN

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

THE period of Lenten torpor in the theatres is ended; once more the electric signs are glittering merrily along Boylston and Tremont streets to call attention to the last tremendous spurt of anxious showmen before the declining season surrenders to more compelling hot weather diversions. It has been a hard forty days for the theatres (almost a total eclipse) for, coming into the final stretch there were but two survivattractions of the first class, "The Vagabond King" at the bert and Fred Stone's brisk entertainment at the Colonial.

the new assortment of wares moving upon the town for post Lenten celebration manage to show only a fair fraction of their exploited tues the theatregoer will be well repaid for his manly Lenten abtence. At any rate, there will be variety in great abundance. Aldy Mr. Frazee has entered the lists with a mid-week performance "Yes, Yes, Yvette," a high stepping musical farce which easily sugats to the observer that he does much better for his Boston friends n theatrical entertainment than he ever did in baseball. This is a lively burst of song and fun and is calculated to remain well into the days of the scorching sun.

WINTHROP AMES, always keen on the better things of the theatre, will descend upon the town tonight at the Plymouth with a revival of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Pirates of Penzance," which, also, will divide next week with "Iolanthe." As may have been noted this season, revivals have done more than passing well and with public temper so plainly directed there is little doubt that Mr. Ames will reap ample reward for his faith and for his labors.

* * *

IN the rush to fill the playhouses with attractions a heavy preponderance of musical plays over the spoken drama is to be observed, a mathematical ratio of five to two. The two purely dramatic visitors will have a clear field of solicitation among folk who like to take their theatre soberly instead of having it spread over with lingerie and song. This produces a fortunate situation for "Pickwick" and "The Constant Nymph," the former a merry comedy culled from Charles Dickens' Pickwick papers and the latter a tragic narrative drawn from Margaret Kennedy's popular novel. To raise the toll of musicals to five, Mr. Dillingham's "Oh, Please," supported by the talents of Beatrice Lillie and Charles Winninger, will bring the Tremont out of darkness into light.

* * *

MR. E. E. CLIVE of the Copley modestly confesses that he is sitting on top of the world. With last Wednesday's performance of "The Ghost Train" that lively mystery farce stepped into first place in the season's endurance contest, a position from which it cannot now be dislodged. When the curtain rings down on tonight's performance the play will have been presented 144 times, leading the phenomenal run of "Queen High" by eight performances. As a matter of interest, the remaining high records for the season are held by "Bunny" with 88 performances and "The Cradle Snatchers" with 84 performances. Yes, indeed, Mr. Clive is doing very nicely.

RAGGED ROMEO WINS

PLEDGING total abstinence and an early visit to the barber's, Edward Nell gets on exceedingly well with Carolyn Thomson in "The Vagabond King," now at the Shubert.

Ex-Follies Girl

LOUISE BROOKS gives Adolphe Menjou close competition for the acting honors in "Evening Clothes" at the Fenway.

'ONE SEAT ON THE AISLE'

Charles Dickens' love for the theatre will find a direct testimonial when his favorite seat is reserved in a dedicatory spirit at the presentation of "Pickwick" at the Majestic Monday night.

The first seat of the third row on the right hand center aisle will be appropriately decorated and dedicated to the memory of this great humanitarian writer of the nineteenth century. It is at the suggestion of Sir Martin Conway, a trustee of Charles Dickens' estate and president of the Dickens Fellowship of London, that this spirit reservation is made.

During a recent visit to this country, when he heard of this dramatization of "Pickwick Papers" from Cosmo Hamilton, co-author with Frank C. Reilly of this Dickens' production, he felt that Dickens' spirit would hover over the immortal characters from Samuel Pickwick Esq., to Sam Weller, his faithful manservant, in the centennial year of their adventures.

When the play opened in Washington, Mrs. Calvin Coolidge occupied the seat adjacent to this especially reserved Dickens' seat.

When Dickens created the tender Tiny Tim and had his character save a seat for departed Scrooge, at the dinner in the "Christmas Carol," he little thought that the tables would be turned so that his customary place in the English theatre be set aside for him in modern America a century later.

Winninger Played Stage Parts at Age of Five

Charles Winninger, featured comedian with Beatrice Lillie, in Charles Dillingham's production of "Oh Please," coming to the Tremont Monday, claims to be versatile. If there is anything connected with the theatrical business, before and behind the curtain line that he has not done since he first went on the stage at the age of five years, it is probably so unimportant that no one can recall it. Mr. Winninger was born into a large family, all of whom went on the stage to keep the Winninger exchequer in a healthy condition. Ask anyone in the Middle West if he ever heard of the "Five Winninger Brothers" and you will inevitably get an affirmative answer.

AMPLY, HE SLAYS SORROW

YOU CANNOT always fool your wife with little white lies as Herbert Corthell, the well rounded comedian of "Yes, Yes, Yvette," discovers in the action of the Wilbur's sparkling musical offering.

Along Came Ruth

RUTH SHEPLEY comes to the St. James next week as the new leading lady in the new play, "Little Old New York."

NEW LEAD AT ST. JAMES

Trained under two radically different masters of the drama, and backed by experience in motion pictures, vaudeville, farce and heavy drama, Ruth Shepley will next week appear as leading lady at the St. James. She takes the place of Florence Shirley, who will shortly join a stock company in Rochester, N. Y.

Miss Shepley was born in Providence and has enjoyed several long runs in plays in this city. She was here in "The Boomerang."

Her earlier training was under George M. Cohan and David Belasco. She also played with Douglas Fairbanks when he was a legitimate stage star.

Miss Shepley mentioned that after playing three years in "The Boomerang" there were times when she felt that she would have to scream when the time came for her to say the lines again. She is looking forward to playing the variety of parts which will come to her in the Keith-Albee stock company.

Noted Optical Illusions Seen in New State Film

Mirrored panels, strange grottos, and mysterious trapdoors are seen in a veritable enchanted palace in "The Show," Tod Browning's latest production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in which Renee Adoree and John Gilbert again play together. It comes to Loew's State Monday.

Living hands with no bodies attached reach out of the void; live heads are suspended over thin atmospheres and strange ghosts pass to and fro in this remarkable chamber of mysteries which forms the background of the story.

All the tricks of stage magicians of yore have been resurrected for the illusion scenes. "Living hat ladies," "Human spiders," a "Decapitation" in which Gilbert apparently loses his head in an illusion patterned after that of the great Stodare, master magician of London are being reproduced for the odd background of the film.

MONDAY SYMPHONY.

The last of the concerts of the extra Monday evening series by the Boston Symphony Orchestra will be given on Monday evening. Serge Koussevitzky will open the program with Weber's overture to "Oberon."

HOW GILBERT WROTE HIS DRAMAS

As a writer of humorous verse William Schwenk Gilbert is without a peer in English literature. As a dramatist he gave to the English theatre in collaboration with Sir Arthur Sullivan, the most noteworthy drama in generations. As a maker of paradox he is often compared to Bernard Shaw. And surely his policeman in "The Pirates of Penzance," which Winthrop Ames will present, together with "Iolanthe" at the Plymouth, starting tonight, are very near relatives to the chocolate-cream soldier in "Arms and the Man." Like all humorists he had the gift of pathos, as witness "Iolanthe's" song when the mother appeals to the "Lord Chancellor" for the happiness of her son.

Wm. S. Gilbert

Gilbert wrote quickly and easily, according to all historical data. How he concocted his famous operas has been described by Gilbert in his letters to Percy Hetherington Fitzgerald, dramatic critic of the London Observer.

"I write out the play as a story," he writes Mr. Fitzgerald, "just as carefully as though it were to be published in that form. I then try to divide it into acts. I put it by for a fortnight, or more and then rewrite the whole thing without reference to the first copy."

Testimonial Performance at the Hollis Monday

A capacity attendance is looked for at the opening performance of "The Constant Nymph" Monday evening at the Hollis, as the occasion will mark the annual testimonial to Joseph P. Cook, popular manager of the theatre, and Vincent Featherston, treasurer there for the past thirty-five years. George C. Tyler, producer of "The Constant Nymph," was on his way to Europe when Mr. Cook and Mr. Featherston decided to arrange the performance and negotiations had to be carried on by cable.

CONVERSE'S NOVELTY AT SYMPHONY

By MOSES SMITH

Although the season of concerts by the Boston Symphony Orchestra rapidly nears a finale, Serge Koussevitzky fortunately does not allow it to sink into routine. For this week's program he features a first performances anywhere of Converse's "Flivver Ten Million."

A first hearing of the local composer's humorous fantasy for orchestra gave animated pleasure to the audience which applauded lustily, especially when Mr. Koussevitzky called the composer to the stage. Mr. Converse has got hold of a very clever idea, depicting in what he calls a "joyous epic" the birth of the ten millionth flivver (satirically dubbed the "hero"), and the adventures, likely and unlikely in which it partakes.

The music is admirably suited to the program. There is a delicious outburst of sentimental tunes, suggesting petting on a May night while parked by the roadside. Even a collision fails to subdue the spirit of this indomitable one, who shakes himself back into shape and goes on apparently forever.

Five sonatas of Scarlatti, arranged and orchestrated by Tommasini for a ballet, were heard for the first time in their new dress. They made an effective overture to the concert. A renewed hearing of Loeffler's "Memories of My Childhood," which was first presented here last season, strengthened the impressions of sonority and skilful orchestration, but did not convince as to thematic material. Here again the composer was called to the stage and much applauded.

Tschaikovsky's fifth symphony closed the program. This performance of one of Mr. Koussevitsky's greatest show-pieces was disappointing. Admitting his greatness as an interpreter of his countryman, the conductor was not so impressive as when he first brought out his version two years ago.

Benefit Performance for the Late Clyde McArdle

Friends of the late Clyde McArdle, for several years leading "smiler" of the Rhulers' Club of Station WNAC, are to stage a testimonial in his honor at the Somerville theatre Monday night, April 18 at midnight.

PAPA'S PAMPAS PET

THE ARGENTINIANS Fred and Dorothy Stone doing one of their amusing dances in "Criss Cross," the musical extravaganza par excellence at the Colonial.

STAGE AND SCREEN

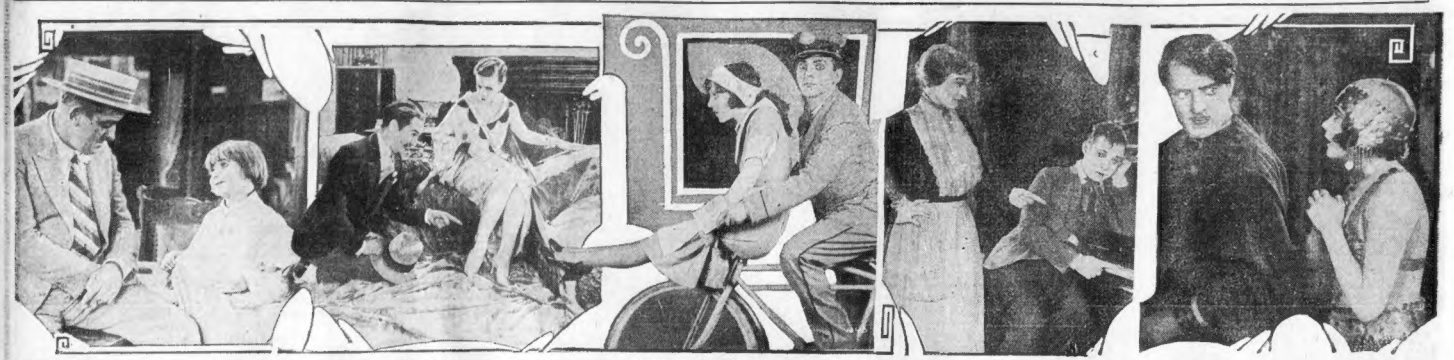
Introducing the Native Sons.

Decidedly Bostonian is the cast Mr. Frazee has provided for "Yes, Yes, Yvette" at the Wilbur. Three of the principals were Boston born and bred and got their theatrical start here when youth had no fears of the future. They are Herbert Corthell, Donald Brian and Jack Mack.

It's All in the Birthplace.

A woman called upon Helen Grenelle of "The Vagabond King" and congratulated her upon her dancing. "It is remarkable," she said, "to see one so graceful and yet so cyclonic." Miss Grenelle explained: "The cyclonic part of it comes natural. You see, I am from Kansas."

FLICKERING SHADOWS THAT 'SOFTLY COME AND GO' IN THE NEW WEEK'S FILM LIST



THE FITNESS OF THINGS, especially this week, is questioned in the most melting manner by that eminent thespian, Mister Jackie Coogan, in "Johnny Get Your Hair Cut," at Loew's Orpheum.

A POINT OF INTEREST in "Stage Madness" at the New Boston is the matter of costumes. Here, Tyler Brook gives an indication and Virginia Valli a promise of what to expect in this regard.

"SPECIAL DELIVERY" at the Metropolitan is the new film with Eddie Cantor becoming letter perfect at his job when it comes to rushing Jobyna Ralston from place to place.

SPRING PRACTICE, as every mother knows, is bound to be very much off key for all youthful musicians. In "Long Pants" at the Olympia, Gladys Brockwell "gets after" Harry Langdon.

THE DARK GENTLEMAN who has "come into" Renee Adoree's life is John Gilbert, as a villain this time. In "The Show" at Loew's State he is the kind who will permit any lady to keep him in cash.

VAUDEVILLE BENEFITS NEXT WEEK

The drive for funds by the National Vaudeville Artists, Inc., in every vaudeville theatre in the city opens tomorrow. The public demonstrations will start at the Parkman bandstand at noon, when a series of bands, clowns and acrobats will entertain the crowd.

All this is leading up to the two V. V. A. midnight benefit performances at both the Metropolitan and Keith-Albee Boston theatres on Thursday night, beginning at 11:30. These two benefits, under the direct charge of Fred Stone, president of the N. V. A., will include 23 jazz bands, 40 acts of vaudeville, together with a bit from every legitimate star now in the city.

Fred Stone, his daughter, Dorothy, and the Tiller girls from his own show; McIntyre and Heath, Nazimova, Bobby O'Neil, Warden Brothers, the leading acts from Keith's, the Keith-Albee Boston, the Orpheum Olympias, and all other theatres and circuits will present last-moving specialties.

CHANGES IN VAUDEVILLE

B. F. KEITH'S—The emotional actress, Nazimova, in a one act play by Edgar Allen Woolf called "A Woman Of The Earth"; the Russian opera diva, Odali Carena, in selected songs; Harry Holmes, comedian, in his act, "The Pessimist"; Marion and Ford, in a comedy act; The Sherman and Rose Revue, dance novelties; Lane and Harper, in a variety offering, "Bits of Wits"; Madeline Patrice, songstress; Three Golfers, and others.

Another Newspaper Man Takes to the Stage

Jean Ford

Sydney Marion and Jean Ford, whose musical comedy melange will be an attraction at B. F. Keith's next week, are veteran vaudeville "hoofers" although still in their twenties. Sydney Marion has been on the stage for fourteen out of his twenty-six years of existence, which would seem to be a pretty fair average. At 12—or for that matter before he was eight—he was a newsie, a singing newsboy on the streets of Boston.

In those days when boy sopranos were much in demand in the music halls to act as gallery echoes of ballad-singing prima donnas, plenty of small sized paper boys augmented their weekly earnings by nightly vocalizing in vaudeville houses. And so young Marion, at twelve, easily induced Dr. Lothrop of the old Howard's Athenaeum of Boston to sponsor his debut in theatricals.

THE THEATRICAL HOUSEWIFE

By ALLENE CRATER STONE
In "Criss Cross," at the Colonial

Allene Crater Stone

While most housewives have their problems and duties, generally sufficient to keep them busy every waking moment, the theatrical housewife is fully as occupied.

It may be that I have coined the words "theatrical housewife." Truly, I've never heard the term before. But it is also a matter of fact that I don't think I've heard of any other mother in the theatrical business so situated as I am, with two stars in the household and playing in the same company.

Not that I claim that in any manner my burden is irksome. Of course, life is ever so much more pleasant when the company is playing in New York, because our home in Forest Hills, on Long Island, is easily accessible, and we are able to go back and forth to the theatre in the city each day.

On tour we must have recourse to hotels for our family life. That means that there is no household to direct, but it does mean that there are many duties to perform. The Stone family is in "menage."

Fortunately, the Easter vacation is now with us and our two non-professional daughters are visiting us to make the family circle complete. Am I a busy housewife now?

Oh yes! I'd almost forgot to state that I must be at the theatre with my husband and daughter to play my part in "Criss-Cross." I have no household budget to keep up—not the accepted kind. But as a housewife I'm a very busy woman, and what more does a housewife expect?

Sinfonians in Concert at Park Theatre Tomorrow

Dok Eisenbourg

Joseph Soucy, treasurer of the Park Theatre is going in for producing. He has signed Dok Eisenbourg and his Sinfonians band for a tour of the New England States and will play his first engagement at the Park tomorrow evening. The Eisenbourg band is a well known organization locally. It has been popular on the air and enjoys a deserved reputation for jazz presentation of the subtlest kind. Each member of the band is an accomplished soloist and a number of them are responsible for various original musical compositions, some of which are on tomorrow night's program.

American Slang Baffles Noted Italian Actor

Although he has been in America less than a year and was unable to speak or understand English when he arrived in New York, Tullio Carmenati, able Italian actor who plays opposite Virginia Valli in "Stage Madness" at the New Boston now has little difficulty in holding up his end of the conversation with Americans. Besides, he admits he has found another great joy. In addition to a mastery of five languages, he is now able to study Shakespeare in the English versions. This and the English Bible have helped him immeasurably in mastering English. "Hot Dog," "Red Hot Mama" and "So's Your Aunt Emma" still confuse him, however.

Carmenati, was formerly leading man with Eleanora Duse, and is a master in emotional roles.

CASELLA FOR POPS.

The advent of Alfredo Casella as the new conductor of the "Pops" will be the feature of the coming forty-second season, which will open on Monday evening, May 2.

The "Gold-Digger" Fascinates Disapproving Public

Helene Lynd, who plays Mabel, one of the "gold-digging" chorus girls in H. H. Frazee's musical comedy, "Yes, Yes, Yvette" at the Wilbur, has been persuaded to throw some light upon the anomaly of why the gold-digger is an ever present source of interest to a public that heartily disapproves of her. "I suppose," Miss Lynd avers, "the modern gold-digger has the same allure for conservative, highly respectable people that the pirates of the high seas had for extremely honest and law-abiding citizens. In fact, the successful feminine gold-digger must possess all the qualities which distinguished those buccaneers of old—courage, a fine disregard of danger, and a love of adventure so strong that it is willing to risk all to experience its thrills.

Helene Lynd

"To put the matter in up-to-date tabloid, everybody admires a man or woman who is willing to 'take a chance, and can get away with it.'

Marie Di Pesa Returns to Hub for Song Recital

After an absence of nearly two years, during which time she spent in Italy studying, Marie Di Pesa, prima donna member of the former Boston Opera Company, will give a song recital at the Copley Theatre on Sunday afternoon, April 24.

For a number of years, this gifted soprano has cherished an ambition to present a program of extraordinary merit. For this purpose her forthcoming concert is entitled, "Songs Across the Centuries."

An Anatomical Explanation.

Denny Mullen, the super-charged story teller of the "White Cargo" company at the Gayety, loves to spoof the Scotch. 'And, therefore, he solemnly explains that the reason most Scots are bow-legged is because they get that way climbing lamp posts to light their pipes.

STAGE AND SCREEN

New Music Master at the "Met."

Gene Rodemich, regarded as a second Paul Whiteman, will today become a permanent fixture at the "Met." Each week he and his band will present a new show. They will also continue making phonograph records and will be known as the Metropolitan Merrymakers.

FASCINATED BY SHAVIAN WITTICISM

Maurice Morris

Maurice Morris, who enacts the role of the benign but hard-drinking old doctor in "White Cargo" at the Gayety, confesses to being a George Bernard Shaw enthusiast. Mr. Morris was born in Ireland, in fact in the same town that gave Shaw to the world, but he stoutly avers that this is not the only reason for his fascination for the Shavian attainments. His regard for his compatriot has a far more peculiar significance. It is based on an almost complete disagreement with all the well known Shaw thrusts at things as they are.

As Morris says: "Any man who can so violently take the opposite side to everything but do it in such an adroit manner charms the attention. I recall the incident of the London premiere of a Shaw play. At its conclusion there was considerable enthusiasm from the audience and the distinguished author being recognized, he was pressed for a speech.

"There was but one dissenting voice, and it came unmistakably clear from the gallery, 'Rotten'. With a whimsical smile, G. B. S., ignoring the crowd, addressed his remarks to the disgruntled gallery god. With a deprecatory wave of the hand Shaw looked upward and said, 'I know, my friend, but what can you and I do against all these people?'

Such wit as that, however sharp, is the genius of a man whom I can never agree with, but can always admire."

JILL MILLER DANCES.

Jil Miller will present a dancing recital consisting of a new suite of interpretive dances at The Barn, No. 36 Joy street, next Friday and Saturday. This is her first public recital in Boston.

STARS OF RESIDENT AND SILENT DRAMA

BETTY JEWEL affords sparkling assistance to the new star, Gary Cooper, in "Arizona Bound" at the Modern and Beacon.

CHOOSES CHEWING as a means to gain the white man's attention. Christine Cooper proves a "doggone dangerous girl" for Joseph Forte in "White Cargo," the heat-treated drama of sun-soaked Africa, now warming things up at the Gayety.

MAY EDISS continues to help provide shivery thrills in "The Ghost Train," Mr. Clive's long run hit at the Copley.

WHAT'S WHAT With Shows REMAINING

"Yes, Yes, Yvette" at the Wilbur. (First week.) A jolly farce set up in the best musical fashion.

* * *

Fred Stone in "Criss Cross" at the Colonial. (Second week.) In which an illustrious father has heaps of help from a talented daughter.

* * *

"The Vagabond King" at the Shubert. (Fifth week.) Probably the most inspiring of recent ventures in operetta.

* * *

"White Cargo" at the Gayety. (Third week.) Showing life at its worst under Africa's tropical sun.

* * *

"The Ghost Train" at the Copley. (Seventeenth week.) Mr. Clive has done it again by shattering the season's endurance record.

Jackie's Diary Should Be Interesting Reading

Readers of Mark Twain will remember what he said about keeping a diary. "It takes only a little vanity to start a diary, but a whole lot of moral courage and character to keep it up." Jackie Coogan began one, not inspired by vanity, but by the promptings of his father, who persuaded his famous son that a diary of his pictures would prove, in after years, interesting reading for himself and family. So Jackie kept a diary on "Johnny Get Your Hair Cut," his new film showing next week at the Orpheum.

HANDEL AND HAYDN IN 'SAMSON'

Two members of the Metropolitan Opera Company, Mme. Julia Claussen, soprano, and Paul Althouse, tenor, will appear at the third and last concert of the season with the Handel and Haydn Society at Symphony Hall tomorrow afternoon. With Emil Mollenhauer conducting, chorus, orchestra and soloists will be heard in a concert version of Saint-Saens' opera, "Samson and Delilah."

Horace Stevens, Australian baritone, will be the High Priest, and Henry Jackson Warren, Boston singer, will take the other baritone roles, "Abimelech" and the "Aged Hebrew."

* * *

Orcha Halprin, violinist, who made his debut here at the age of 14, nine years ago, will give a concert on Tuesday evening at Jordan Hall. In Bach's E major concerto the violinist will be accompanied by a string quartet. The program will open with Vitali's "Chaconne" and will contain two groups of shorter pieces.

MIGHT HAVE TRIED THE AIR MAIL

Johnya Ralston, playing with Eddie Cantor in "Special Delivery," now at the Metropolitan, was rushed special delivery, from San Antonio, Texas, within a few hours after she had arrived to spend a vacation with her fiance, in order to appear in this comedy.

In fact, Miss Ralston's whole experience was pretty much "Special Delivery" from the time she completed her last scenes in "The Kid Brother," which was the last picture of her three-year contract with Harold Lloyd, until she started work with Eddie Cantor. For weeks she and her fiance, Richard Arlen, had figured on the termination of her contract as permitting them to spend a vacation together in Texas where Arlen was on location with the Paramount "Wings" company.

On completion of "The Kid Brother" Miss Ralston caught the first train for San Antonio, and had just greeted her fiance for the first time in three months when she received a long distance telephone call from B. P. Schulberg, Paramount associate producer, urging her to return to Hollywood by the first train.

STUDIO PLAYERS DRAMA.

The Studio Players will present "Turandot" (Princess of China), at the Fine Arts Theatre on April 22 and 23. The play is produced under the personal direction of Kasimir A. Kovalsky, a former associate of Stanislavsky of the Moscow Art Theatre.

READY TO BAG FOUL. Johnny Bigler, Senators' catcher, was caught in this remarkable pose just as he had doffed his mask to go after a high foul. Needless to say, Johnny was right under it when it descended, and they chalked up another putout beside his name.

WANNINGER HITS. Wanninger, Red Sox third baseman, is shown taking a healthy clout at the ball in the opening game with the Senators at Washington.

FORE: The official opening of Boston's municipal links took place today when William P. Long, Park Commissioner, teed off at the first hole. There was a large crowd on hand to witness the opening ceremonials, and little time was lost by the golfers in following the Park Commission of women golfers warming up for the first round of the season.

TEN THOUSAND DOLLARS is worth getting one's bathing suit wet for. Miss Ethel Hertle, champion swimmer of Connecticut thinks so, and has entered the Lake George swimming marathon to be held by the American Legion on July 11. Miss Hertle holds records in the 100 and 880-yard events.

IF FLY-SWATTING becomes a sport, the players will look something like the above lacrosse player. He is Captain Richard Hogue of the Yale lacrosse team. The net is used to carry along the ball. The headgear is to protect a player in case swatting becomes dangerous.

WOODSIES PLAY COATS TODAY

The J. & P. Coats eleven of Pawtucket play the Woodsies today at Walpole street in an American League game.

It is the first home game for the Hub team since it won the American Pro Cup and the blue and gold eleven is sure of a fine reception as they take the pitch against the Threadmakers.

The last time the elevens met in a league match the Pawtucket eleven came out on top and at a time when the Hub team was at its best.

There is a possibility that Barney Battles and Tommy McMillan will be unable to turn out for the Woodsies. Both are suffering from injuries received in the cup finals against Brooklyn.

A number of Charity cup games among the amateurs are also scheduled for today with the Clan Robinson-Clan McGregor tilt out at Gibson Field, Dorchester, the tit-bit.

The Biggest Moment in My Biggest Fight

By HARRY WILLS

THE biggest fight I've had in the many years of my campaigning in the ring was with Luis Firpo, the Wild Bull of the Pampas, who had come so close to knocking out Jack Dempsey in a sensational battle.

I had been told before the bout that the winner was certain to get a match for the championship. I suppose the idea was that Firpo would beat me, which would make an excellent ballyhoo for a return match between Luis and the Manassa Mauler.

We fought before an enormous crowd in Boyles Thirty Acres. It did not take me long to find out that the giant from the Argentine was completely at my mercy. He thought himself the strongest man in the game, but soon found that I was stronger. He thought that he could knock me any way he want, but don't know him out. Dempsey is at the ringside, and if you look too good we'll never get a fight with him.

It was a big disappointment to me, but Mullins knows more of the inside of the game's politics than I do. I knew that I could stop Firpo when I wanted to do it, but not at the expense of missing a meeting with Dempsey. So, from then on I was content simply to outpoint him by as great a margin as I could without knocking him out.

I, who had been seeking a match with Dempsey for years, was making a far better showing than Jack himself. Time, the champion had dropped Firpo often in the two rounds they had fought, but Firpo had punished him badly in return. I felt that a world's title match was within my grasp as the Bull fell to the floor.

When I returned to my corner Paddy Mullins, my manager, said "Nice him, Harry. Outpoint him as much as you want, but don't knock him out. Dempsey is at the ringside, and if you look too good we'll never get a fight with him."

He is built along the same lines as Crosby, and several pounds heavier than Elliott Putnam, last season a signal caller.

Rickard Signs Up Delaney and Paolino

New York, April 16 (I.N.S.)—Paolino Umsdun, the Basque woodchopper, will meet Jack Delaney, light heavyweight champion, in a 15-round bout on June 23 at the Yankee Stadium, signing of the agreement was announced this afternoon by a representative of Tex Rickard.

Both the Canadian and Irishman of the two fighters followed several days of bartering over the length of the bout and the financial returns for Paolino. The fact that Jess McMahon, matchmaker for Madison Square Garden, who was conducting the negotiations in the absence of Rickard, was not listed as matchmaker for the Rickard sporting club which is staging the fight, also complicated matters.

However, all difficulties were smoothed out, it was announced, with Paolino receding a little from his first monetary demands and Delaney agreeing to the Spaniard's insistence on a 15-round bout.

Harvard strives for its third consecutive baseball victory at Soldiers field this afternoon when the Crimson crosses bats with the Bates nine.

Boston University and Springfield have fallen before the powerful Crimson nine to date. Bates will be the next victim, according to the native supporters.

Coach Fred Mitchell has elected Dick Ketchum, sophomore from Wollaston, to twirl for the Crimson. It will be the first start for the youngster in a varsity game and his progress will be closely watched.

Ketchum looks like the most promising of the additions to the Harvard corps this year. His superb twirling has only been eclipsed by his pitching. He weighs close to 170 pounds and has more speed than any of the varsity hurlers. As a batter he leads the moundsmen.

Bates will be opening its season and the only games during this week from the Maine colleges is that the nine has seven veterans in the line up that will start against Harvard.

This will be the last game for Harvard on its home diamond for ten days as the next game tomorrow for its annual Southern trip The Crimson showing to date has far surpassed expectations and Coach Mitchell is very optimistic of the team's chances of scampering through its long schedule with a high average.

Everett Donaghy, formerly a Boston Latin star, continues to hold the berth at shotstop. After a very auspicious debut against Springfield Donaghy appears to have won over the job permanently. Ralph Sullivan continues as the utility infielder.

Harvard this year has a real hitting club. Seven of the regulars are hitting the .300 mark with Captain Izzy Zarakov and Bill Lord are just under the average mark of .400.

Spring Grid Session at Harvard Best Ever

"We have closed one of the finest Spring seasons that I have ever witnessed in my football experience at Harvard," said Head Coach Arnold Horween this morning before leaving for Chicago.

"The spirit has been fine and we have accomplished more than I expected."

When asked in regard to the new lateral passes Horween replied briefly, "The lateral pass has possibilities. We have experimented with it at length and hope to experiment still further with it in the Fall.

"As regards to the prospects, only scholastic standing can tell. In my closing talk to my squad I impressed on them that football is secondary to studies and I know that my words will carry some weight."

Shag Shaughnessy, McGill coach, who has been helping Horween for the past three weeks, regards the Harvard chances as bright. "All depends on the ability of the Harvard backs. The possibilities are there and next Fall will tell the

Frank Dane Fights to Escape Jail Term

—By Jack Conway—

"I JUST left Frank Dane up in Col. Bob McKirdy's office," said Mr. Boston today. "You remember, Frank, of course," went on the veteran. "Back ten years or so ago he used to stage boxing shows at the Scenic Temple on Berkeley street in the South End.

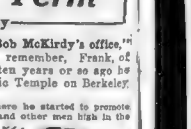
"Frank then journeyed to Washington where he started to promote boxing on a big scale. Vice-President Dawes and other men high in the official life of the Capital were among his patrons.

"The boxing world began to sit up and take notice once Dane, with his artistic touch, began putting on major league attractions. With most of the fans at the ringside sporting tuxedos, Frank issued a ruling that all seconds and managers must parade to their corners dressed in tuxedos.

"I shall never forget the first time Frank Shannon went to Washington with a flock of Boston fighters. Shannon started for his corner decked out in a rather loud sweater Dane called a flock of others and by using only reasonable force decorated Shannon with a tuxedo after which he permitted him to go into the ring.

"A bout between Honeyboy Finnegan and Johnny Dundee was Dane's chief promotion effort. The newspaper decision went to Honeyboy and started the Dorchester battler on his march to fame.

"Dane's club in Washington was the show place of the cauliflower racket in America. It was the smartest thing to the National Sporting Club of London for class. You couldn't get into the place until your application was first approved by a board of directors which included the names of men high in public life.



Mr. Boston

"SUCH observing boxing chiefs as Tex Rickard, Humbert Fugazy, Tom Goodwin, Col. Bob McKirdy and Eddie Mack were figuring they would have to change the setting for their shows if they were to keep pace with Dane. The latter had proved that boxing could be made as much of a social affair as the opening night at the opera.

"Just when Frank was planning some new innovations, some unkind individual attempted to and closed his club on the ground that boxing is not permitted in the District of Columbia. As though this was not a severe enough slap for one who had tried to place the old ring game in the sun, Dane was found guilty and sentenced to three years in jail.

"Frank is a fighter and has carried his case to the Supreme Court of the United States, which is expected to hand down a decision by the Fall.

"I WOULDN'T be surprised to pick up a newspaper and read about where somebody had been convicted of witchcraft. There once was a time when boxing promoters and referees ran the same risks.

"Nowadays the boxing promoters have pretty clear sailing. The sport has been legalized in 41 States and is winked at in the others.

"President Coolidge as Governor of Massachusetts signed the bill which legalized boxing in the Bay State.

"During the war, the Army and Navy went in for boxing. Even in peace times boxing is one of the principal forms of recreation for the boys in the service. At Fort Banks each Summer, admission is charged for the bouts held there.

"All this makes the District of Columbia appear rather backward. Its views on boxing are like those held in most States 100 years ago.

"And to think that Dane, who conducted boxing on a higher plane than it was ever staged in America, should receive a jail sentence for his efforts. Of course I know some of the tin-eared scouts who were forced to wear tuxedos, wash their necks and refrain from using profanity won't offer any sympathy to Frank. But you cannot get away from the fact that Dane has done the boxing game a real service."

U. S. Poloists Prepare to Defend Cup

New York, April 16 (A.P.)—Mobilization of Uncle Sam's polo forces for the international cup competition with England in September gets under way today.

The American team is to be selected from a list including four veterans and a number of younger players from all parts of the country, much of the month of July will be devoted to trial matches on the basis of which the team will be chosen.

Preparations for defense of the cup began with announcement yesterday by the United States Polo Association that the international duel will take place September 8, 10 and 14 at the Meadow Brook Club, Westbury, Long Island.

Prominent candidates for defense of the cup include Devereux Milburn, "big four," Devereux Milburn, who will lead the American forces, J. Watson Webb, Monroe Stevenson and Tommy Hitchcock.

Close competition is assured them by the number of other fast players who have been invited to try out for the team.

"They Never Come Back," Does Not Apply to Marathon Runners

EVENING AMERICAN SPORTS

182 Scheduled to Start in Thirtieth Annual B. A. A. Marathon

By A. C. BUCK.

One hundred and eighty-two entries, including those of six former winners, have been received for the 30th annual B. A. A. Marathon, which will be held over the Hopkinton to Boston course Tuesday.

Three more names were added to the list when the first mail was received today. The late entries are Arthur Hoppenie of Prince Edward Island, Charles P. Hastings of the Glencoe A. C. of New York, and William J. McGill of the St. Joseph's Catholic Club of Pawtucket, R. I.

Manager Tom Kanaly and his assistants were hoping to hear from Chuck Mellor but it now seems likely that the winner of the 1925 race will be missing when the long large field is sent on its way at noon Patriots' Day.

Mellor has his heart set on making the Olympic trip in 1928 and it is believed that he is saving himself for a supreme effort next year. While Chuck will be missed this year, even his presence could hardly improve on the class of the field.

FABRE DANGEROUS.

Edouard Fabre of Montreal, winner of the Marathon in 1918, is back for another try. Reports from Canada state that Fabre has been training for two years in the hope of turning in a record breaking performance in the Unicorn race. A strong, powerful runner, Fabre is a dangerous contender for the National A. A. U championship, which goes to the winner of the grind.

The veteran, Clarence De Mar, will make another bid for honors in this year's race. De Mar has finished first four times in the classic. He is the present National champion, having won the title in the Laurel to Baltimore Marathon a year ago.

Bill Kennedy, the bricklayer, who has probably run as many races as De Mar, starts again this year. Bill galloped off with the big prize in 1917. He is due to arrive in Boston today with his protege, Whitey Michelson. The latter finished fourth a year ago.

That powerful runner, Frank Zuna, is back for another try. Stories to the effect that Zuna is slipping, have caused the Newark plumber to come with fire in his eye. Zuna is determined to prove to the world that he is still one of the greatest of Marathon runners. Frank won in 1921.

LINDER IN COME-BACK.

The flat-footed Carl Linder, is included in the list of former winners. He headed the pack in 1919. After being out of competition, Linder is making a comeback, lured by the approaching Olympic games.

And then there is Johnny Miles of Sidney Mines, N. S. No one knew Johnny when he came to Boston to run the Marathon. At the start he was just another kid, who might cover five or 10 miles and then call it a day. At the finish Miles was a hero, having run Albin Stenroos, the Olympic champion into the ground, and triumphed in soul-stirring style.

These former winners will have their followers, who believe they will repeat. Others like various runners in the field. Whitey Michelson has his supporters. So has Karl Koski of the Finish-American A. C. J Forcroft Carlton, ninth in last year's race, is favored by many to upset the dope and win. Nestor Erickson is another possibility in the field.

HENIGAN TO TRY AGAIN.

Jimmy Henigan of the Dorchester Club starts again Tuesday. A great 10-miler, Henigan has always found the Marathon distance a little too long. He will be with the leaders for the first 10 or 15 miles and then is likely to fall back.

Arrangements have been made to have relief and checking stations along the course. At the former the runners will be given nourishment and medical aid if desired or needed. Each runner will be checked as he passes the checking station. This should assure every Marathoner covering the full distance, provided that he reaches the finish line.

It should be a great race. All that is needed is good weather.

FORMER MARATHON WINNERS OUT TO REPEAT

Majority of Local Golf Clubs to Officially Open on April 19

By BILL GRIMES

The first team matches of the Women's Golf Association of Boston having been played, and the season thereby officially opened, invitation, open and club tournaments will be staged regularly from now until late in the Fall.

With rarely an exception, every golf club throughout this section has a tournament scheduled for Patriots' Day. For years, April 19 has been one of the banner days in golf throughout Greater Boston, most clubs staging their initial tournaments of the season on this day.

Although from time to time during the season interest lags in club tournaments, there is always a large turnout for the Patriots' Day events.

Due to the fact that many of the golf clubs have set aside Tuesday as "Dan Horan Day," exceptionally large crowds are expected to get into action on the holiday.

The only open tournament of the month will be held at the Woodland Golf Club on April 27 and 28. The event will be an 18 hole handicap medal play tourney and due to the exceptionally fine condition of the Montclair course, a big field is expected.

STRATTON TO DEFEND TITLE.

Emory P. Stratton of Brae Burn, who established himself as one of the leading medal play golfers in New England last season, lead the field at Wollaston last year and he will be on hand to repeat.

There are two contests on the Massachusetts Country Club list for next month, one in May, the Women's Golf Club will offer a beauty four on April 30 and then from the 4th to the 7th the Tedesco Country Club will hold a Scotch foursome, after which a two-day handicap medal play event will be staged at the Framingham Country Club.

Along with the United States open at the Oakmont Country Club in Pittsburgh, and the Massachusetts

The Massachusetts Golf Association will conduct 37 open golf championships with the closing season starting on April 23 and ending October 21 with the mixed foursome at the Country Club.

Golf Notes

By BILL GRIMES

It will take a team composed of real golfers to stop Miss Theresa Winson's Central District aggregation this Spring. Central won the odd point from Northern in the first match of the season through the playing of the supposedly weaker members.

With the material available, the Brae Burn Country Club should be able to gather a second team capable of winning more than a single point from Southern, which was the case at Wollaston on Thursday. Mrs. J. Russell Bancroft brought home the bone for Brae Burn point.

The Albemarle Golf Club will not open its regular course until the holiday. All spring the members have been playing on temporary greens but nary a complaint or protest has been heard, for each and every member appreciates the benefits that the greens will derive by being allowed to come in properly.

Hope Emory Stratton reconsiders his decision to stay out of Boston Football League matches this spring. Stratton and Eddie Stimpson compose one of the smoothest looking best ball teams in this vicinity.

So as to be right at the peak of their games for their 1927 club tournament, every golfer in the section is pulling for Dan Horan over the week-end and, if their wishes are realized, the Patriot is going to be heavy on all counts.

Once again, the local golfers have brought forward a couple of clubs have set aside Patriots Day for Dan Horan.

Mack's Treasures Look Like Antiques

By DAVIS J. WALSH

International News Service Sports Editor

New York, April 16.—Connie Mack's collection of human heirlooms were on their way out of New York today, leaving in their wake three ball games and, apparently, a highly unfavorable impression upon the local intelligensia.

The latter after a reasonable interval of intolerance during which they view with some contempt the combined effort of Eddie Collins to get a base hit and Ty Cobb to catch a fly ball, today felt the barrier raised and they panned Connie's speculative investments with great enthusiasm.

"Cobb looks like one of the worst outfielders in the major leagues," wrote one man, after the four game series with the Yankees ended yesterday.

"Speaking of the 9 to 9 tie of Thursday's another decided.

"If the Mackmen had had a real right fielder in the first inning, Lazzeri would have got no triple. Cobb's creaky joints stretched a single into a three-bagger."

COBB KNOWS TOO MUCH.

Frankly, Cobb so far has looked exactly what he happens to be! An old-timer who thinks he knows what he knows. As to that it may yet develop that he knows too much for the good of the ball club.

I saw Connie come out in front of the dugout yesterday to wave Cobb over toward the foul line with Gehrig at the plate, Ty moved with apparent good grace, but the next moment he returned to the dugout section.

This time Connie let the matter go by default. Cobb's hitting during the series was good; yet two of them were scratches and on the whole he seemed to lack something of his old punch.

Now for Eddie Collins.

COLLINS NOT SO GOOD.

"Collins didn't get a hit during the series," declared one of our most eminent minds today. "And has uncovered an almost alarming disposition to kick the ball away."

What the boys in the back room seem to be concerned about is how long Connie plans to string along with his antiques. They candidly declared today that the Philadelphia Athletics, as at present constituted, are going to be up with considerable haste and point out that Connie has a first-class ball club sitting placidly on the bench.

Of course, boys will be boys and the natural rejoinder is that you can't convict a ball club on two games. However, in my opinion, Matthew Christopher Collins will be able to finish the season.

Furthermore Dudley Branom, for whom Mack paid $30,000, was replaced by Jim Poole after the second game.

Connie himself admitted last night that he was uncertain about his course with the team.

"Some of them don't look so good," he said, sadly. "However, we are only getting started."

BAN 'STUFFY' FOR 3 DAYS

New York, April 16 (A. P.)—Stuffy McInnis, manager of the Philadelphia Nationals, is under suspension for three days "for using offensive language" in two run-ins with umpires Thomas Jones and Claude Hendler of the National League announced today.

The suspension covers today, Monday and Tuesday.

McInnis was warned about his conduct after being put out of the park Thursday by Umpire Jones. The suspension followed a similar row yesterday at Philadelphia when the Philly pilot was chased off the field by Umpire Pete McLoughlin.

N. E. League Adopts 98-Game Schedule

The 98-game schedule drawn up by President Claude Davidson has been officially adopted by the New England League club officials.

All eight teams will be in action on May 16, the first day of the season, as follows: Portland at Salem, Lewiston at Nashua, Manchester at Lawrence, and Lynn at Haverhill.

The New England League ruling which in the past has prevented affiliated clubs from engaging in preseason exhibition games, was changed to read "No club can play more than two games with any one club in the league prior to opening of the season."

A letter from Mr. Otto W. Eisele, of New York City, advises me that there is an organization, of which he is secretary, called the Cycling Division of the Unione Sportiva Italiana, with 118 active cyclists as members. They are, I gather, amateurs.

Mr. Eisele says the organization has grown steadily in t years. In 1922 they had a membership of sixty-five. Moreover, Mr. Eisele cites the growth of the number of the right hand rather snugly against the thumb of the left hand, and hold it. Near the top of the back swing, and at the top, be most careful to keep the fingers closed against the shaft. You must do this to keep control of the club in your hands. The instant you release your grip, hand control of the club is gone. In the forward swing, first slide forward through your body, which starts the club returning. Let the club swing downward without very much effort on your part to hurry it. Then as it nears the ball, throw it. Throw it clear through the ball as far as you can.

RUNYON Says—

IN a discussion on old-time bicycle riders in this column not long ago, I said that the once famous Major Taylor, the negro whirlwind, is in the real estate business in Worcester, Mass.

A letter from George V. Tuohey of Worcester, corrects this statement. He tells me that Taylor has been a very sick man for the past year, and that a few months ago a fund was collected for him by a committee headed by Harry Worcester Smith, a well-known sportsman.

It seems that the Major lost everything he owned in an auto tire he invented, but which or some reason never was put on the market. Mr. Tuohey says the tire has merit, at that.

Reggie Is Known as Daddy of Racing

WHAT do you know of bicycling as a sport, anyway?

That is outside of the six-day races? Do you know the champions of the racket? For instance, that Pete Moeskops, of Holland, is the world's professional champion? That Victor Linart, of Belgium, is the world's motor-paced champ? And that Avanti Martinetti, of Italy, is the world's amateur champion? Ask me anything.

The most familiar name in bicycling today is that of Reggie McNamara, of course.

He is accounted the greatest six-day champion according to the great Alfred Goulett, who seems to have some say in such things, of flesh, bicycle and otherwise. The [illegible] as applied to Reggie as a matter of courtesy would be better to say that he is the greatest of the six-day champions.

The American professional champion is William Spencer, of Newark, N. J., which is the American breeding ground of our bicyclists. The American motor-paced champion is Victor Hopkins, of Davenport, Iowa, and the American amateur champion is said to be William Coles, of Brantford, Canada.

It is not quite clear to [illegible] Canadian can be the champion, but that is [illegible] find it in the Amateur [illegible] with the statement [illegible] Writer, of Australia, is [illegible] can professional alliance. The American amateur champ was Leroy [illegible] of Kearney, N. J.

FULLER-SUGGS OUT TO BLOCK TITLE BOUT

Both Sammy Fuller and "Cobb" Suggs, both colored managers, have protested to the New York Boxing Commission against the proposed match for Jack Honey Boy Payne and Jack Kid Wagner for the vacant featherweight title in Brooklyn early in June.

Fuller and Suggs, who are to meet in a 10-round bout for the [illegible] A. next Friday night, feel that they are more entitled to a match at the championship than Payne and Wagner. The North End boy's claim is based on the fact that on Feb. 28 he won a decision over Chapman in a bout at the Arena. Fuller won that bout and won it decisively, and yesterday a telegram went to the New York Boxing Commission apprising them of that fact and asking that Fuller be named as Finnegan's opponent.

Suggs, who is looked upon as the greatest colored boxer since Joe Gans, says that Fuller feels that he is entitled to the bout for two reasons. The first is that [illegible] ford is the best of any man in the featherweight class, including [illegible] dora victories over Benny Bass, Sammy Fuller and Chapman and more than 150 other victories over featherweights in all parts of the country.

WRESTLERS IN NOVEL STUNTS

While all wrestlers have more or less the same routine of training in preparation for a match, the different hobbies indulged in by different wrestlers is interesting. Take for example the four men who take part in the big double wind up at the Boston Arena on next Tuesday night.

Abe Kashin, Jewish champion wrestler, does road work and all kinds of gym stunts, but he likes to show off on a horse.

Ed Strangler Lewis, who meets him next Tuesday night, is the hard rest trainer in the game. He swims for hours. He rows in a boat with three or four big fours tied fast, for as much as ten miles.

He wrestles for two hours at a time and has a novel way of training with the wooden head dummy. Another feature of his work in a gym stand but, tied to something overhead. He lugs and pulls at it for hours. His sometimes works as much as [illegible] hours a day in training.

How to Tempt Appetites That Are Fussy

By MARTHA LEE

SO MANY of you write me that you have the problem of trying to tempt the appetite of children or grown-ups in your family who are recovering from various ills, perhaps we can well devote today to devising ways to tempt these capricious appetites.

I know I need not repeat what I have said so many times that the dainty preparation and serving of food is half the battle. Another hint, serve small portions.

Better have your patient ask for a second serving than turn away from a large serving.

For this reason it is better to serve the invalid's meals by courses rather than loading up a tray all at one time as is so often done. To avoid the danger of spilling liquids from cups into saucers, while carrying them to the patient I think it is a good plan to bring all liquids in a covered pitcher and then pour them into the cup or glass.

Don't keep leftover eatelets or other odds and ends in the sick room between meals. Remember the convalescent palate is very sensitive to seasonings and temperatures. Invalid cookery requires less seasoning than the normal appetite and more moderate degrees of heat and cold.

Don't give your patient an egg nog in his medicine glass. The glass is too closely associated with the unpleasant subject of medicines. And of course you will be careful to keep all the invalid's foods closely covered while in the refrigerator so that they will not absorb odors from other foods.

If you have a good big refrigerator perhaps you can reserve one whole compartment for your convalescent.

Eggs and milk in various forms are of course the perfect foods, but sometimes we find a patient who has a real or fancied dislike for eggs or a weakened digestion that does not permit him to drink milk in sufficiently large quantities to be of much use.

Did you know that gelatine added to milk will greatly increase its food value and digestibility? Or it can be added to cereals or hot cocoa or chocolate. Gelatined milk is made by soaking one teaspoon gelatine in cold water, dissolving it over boiling water and adding it to a quart of milk.

Soaked in the same way a teaspoonful can be added to the morning cereal just before taking it from the double boiler. Gelatine can also be added to the invalid's ice cream and I do hope that you have one of the baby ice cream freezers you can set right up in your kitchen sink and make a big cupful of ice cream in less than ten minutes. One per cent. of gelatine added to ice cream will increase its nutritious value almost 20 per cent.

The addition of gelatine to any of the invalid's soups will make them more delicious and nourishing. Beef tea is valuable in the invalid's diet because it gives it variety, "warms up" the patient, is excellent in cases of weakened digestion because it stimulates the appetite. In some cases where the quantity of beef tea could not be taken by the patient, concentrated beef extract may be given in small quantities at frequent intervals.

Milk, eggs, crackers, or bread are frequently added to beef tea to increase its food value. For the making of beef tea for the convalescent, the beef should be cut from the upper or lower part of a round of heavy beef. This will give good flavor and a large quantity of juice. Half a pound of beef should yield

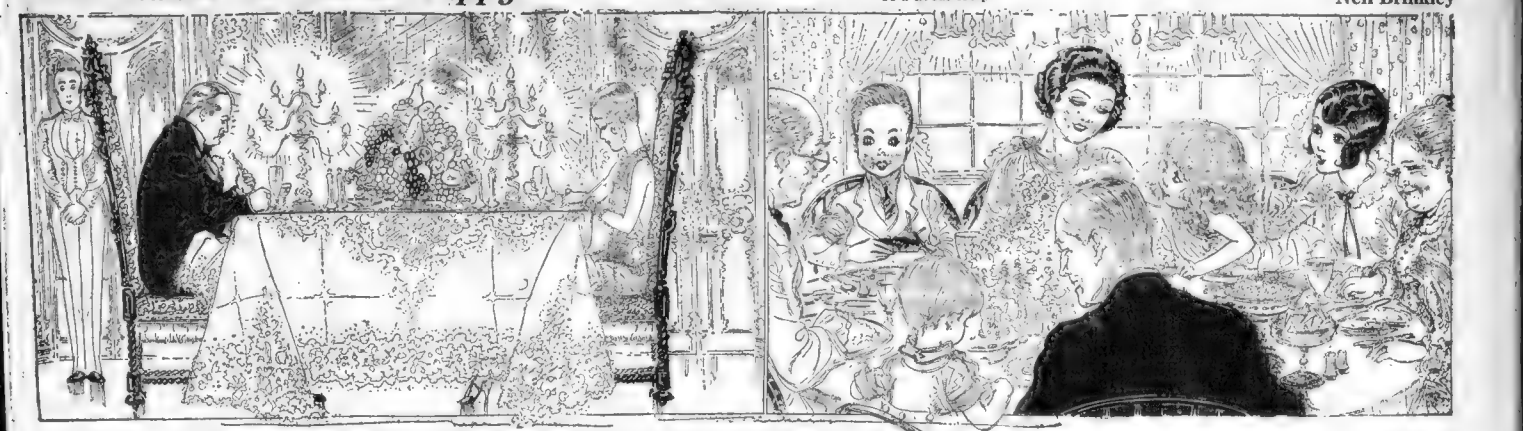
What Makes the Home Happy?

A Happy Dinner Table Is a Great Help

DRAWN BY Nell Brinkley



MANY a person, long an exile from childhood and the places that know that child that he was, remembers most persistently, most poignantly, as the most happy place, that dinner table at his home.

A dinner table can be a hilarious and festive gathering of the clan. And it can be a short, solemn ceremony that is soon gotten over and amounts to nothing but a stoking of a mysterious piece of machinery.

I have made the picture on the left a rich one. And the other not so rich; rather poor in comparison.

But that I mean to say that no amount of lovely things, delicious things, luxurious things at a dinner table will make it a happy one if Companionship is not there and Gumption is in it. One table is not unhappy BECAUSE it is rich; the other is happy just BECAUSE it is humble.

The contrast is meant to be not in the comparative wealth at the two tables. But in the comparative spirits who eat at them! You might make the poor table a little more attractive and it still would be happy. You might take away from the rich table all of its most costly adornments and it would be very happy.

She meets Tom Ware, who is warned by Lupino to keep "hands off." Ware resents Lupino's attitude. Jacqueline, angry, leaves the table. One of the singers tells her that she can keep Lupino in his place if she is clever. Lupino makes advances to Jacqueline and she threatens to leave. He refuses to allow this and apologizes. He asks her to be friendly and extends his hand.

When Jacqueline leaves the Sea Shell after midnight she finds Lupino waiting to take her home. She refuses his escort. He refuses to allow this. They see Tom Ware waiting in a roadster. Lupino takes Jacqueline's arm. She is accosted by a man whom Lupino knocks down. With a sinking heart, Jacqueline realizes that Lupino has killed the fellow.

Frightened, Jacqueline begs Lupino to leave her. He refuses and tells her that he has done this thing for her. He begs her not to "turn him down in any wrangle with the cops."

Lupino tells Jacqueline that he is aware she doesn't like him. He stirs her sympathies. While talking she becomes aware of a third presence—a policeman!

A man who had seen the slaying had summoned the police. Lupino is arrested. He tries to shield Jacqueline. She is detained as a witness. Lupino begs her not to lose her nerve and hints that the murder was justified.

Lupino is held. Jacqueline is allowed to go home. The dead man has been known as "The Lump," a criminal of low type. Public sympathy favors Lupino, who admits having killed "The Lump." He declares in a statement his love for Jacqueline. Abe Gordon, a criminal lawyer, comes into the Lupino case.

CHAPTER 12.

"Miss Kay, when can I see you?"

With a flash of memory Jacqueline recalled Tom Ware as she had seen him that night in the Sea Shell—his tall, sinewy figure, his smiling gray eyes, his quiet, deferential manner. Of all the people she had met in Boston he alone had reached her and stirred something in her heart.

"I can't see you. I'm not going to see anybody," she told him, with just a tinge of uncontrollable regret in her voice.

"I've got to see you," he told her nervously. "It's very important."

But this, she knew, was impossible; was but an obvious device. Because she liked him better than any man she knew in Boston, a paradoxical pride made him the last person she wished to see now in the midst of the humiliation that was upon her.

"I'm sorry, I can't see you," she said.

"Good Lord—I hope you're not taking that 'Forbidden Women' stuff seriously!" The voice over the wire was mildly explosive with irritation. "I'm not one of those sheiks that your boss has been raving about. Of all the nauseating blah that's been pulled in this town, that stuff is the worst. But listen—seriously, I want to see you because I think I know something of your interest. I won't take more than fifteen minutes of your time, if you'll let me come over; or I'll meet you anywhere you say. I'm not trying to make a date with you: I'm trying to help you."

Despite her strong resolution, Jacqueline felt herself weakening; the ineffable mystery of personal magnetism began to creep through her with a tempting urge. In the end she yielded.

A quarter of an hour later, Tom Ware was with her in the shabby downstairs parlor. Much of the thrilling impetus of their first meeting came back, but she was too afraid now to respond to it as she might have under less painful circumstances. Nevertheless the very presence of his tall form, his handsome ingratiating face, made her heart beat a little faster and inspired a curious nameless sensation in her breast, which she put at once under rigid control.

"What I have just said is merely preliminary," he stated, "and has nothing, perhaps to do with such gratuitous advice as I came here to give you. There's just one thing I want to tell you, because I'm afraid nobody else is going to do it. Do you realize what all of this sort of thing—this Lupino business—is going to do to you?"

Jacqueline looked at him silently, steadily.

"It's going to ruin you," he told her vehemently. "It's going to ruin your career, your life—by that I mean in every way. I mean your morals, your chastity. Please don't misunderstand me—I realize perfectly that I'm a fool, but I'm trying to talk to you as I would to my own sister if I had one. This man Lupano, so far as you're concerned, is the most dangerous man in Boston."

Jacqueline's face reddened.

"He's like a poisonous spider, weaving a web," Tom Ware went on grimly. "You're too ignorant of life and the sordid background behind the night life thrill to distinguish between the harmless elements and the moral leprosy of these wolves who are always on the lookout for human prey. You don't know these things because you've never had a chance to learn them. This man Lupino, that the papers are making such a fuss about, is simply a gutter-thug. Oh, I know you feel perfectly safe, but what you don't realize is that there are a thousand ways in which you can be dragged down to destruction when you allow yourself to remain in close association with such a creature. Association will merge gradually into power. . . . You can't get away with it, Jacqueline Kay. As sure as you're sitting in this room with me, you're going to the devil unless you break at once with Lupino!

"I came here to tell you this with every honest intention in the world, and to offer you any assistance that I can. Already you are being known as Lupino's woman, and one of these days you'll be just that in fact, unless you get yourself together and break away now—before it's too late."

Jacqueline suddenly got to her feet.

"Mr. Ware," she said, her voice trembling. "Will you please leave this house at once?"

His tone on his feet, infinite sadness in his gray eyes.

"Certainly I will. I'm terribly sorry I have insulted you. Good afternoon."

The door closed behind him, and Jacqueline, with a wild surge in her heart, struggling to fight down in a clamorous inner conscience that told her that Tom Ware . . . that she was dangerously near losing uncontrollably in love with everything about him!

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN INDIVIDUAL PARTNERS.

DEAR MRS. BEECKMAN:

Will you kindly help Sis and me solve a problem which has been bothering us for some time?

1—We expect to ask two brothers to escort us to the school prom. We are not so particular about which one escorts each of us, so we had planned to address a note to the older boy and let him decide. But mother says that we should each decide which boy we want to escort us and send a note individually to that one. Please tell me which would be the better plan.

2—Will you please let us know how much before the prom we should ask them?

I THOROUGHLY agree with mother. It would be much more gracious of you to "choose your partner" and write her own note. Even if you have to draw lots!

2—If they are very popular, you had best get your bid in early. As a matter of fact, seriously, the earlier you invite your partners for a prom the better—unless you think that your taste may change in the meantime.

'Hollywood Girl'; Bobbie Discovers MacCloud's Letter

By BEATRICE BURTON.

Chapter XLVII.

Gus did not look up for a minute or so.

He merely nodded and went on reading a letter that lay before him on the desk. Bobbie could see that he frowned as his eyes traveled down the pale gray page, with a silver monogram at the top. She wondered whose monogram it was.

"Well?" he said finally, his eyes still on the letter, "I'll be—jiggered!" His frown had turned into a black scowl.

"What's the matter?" Bobbie came closer to him, and leaned against the desk.

"Gosh, you look like a billion!" Gus' eyes suddenly smiled, clearing the scowl away from his face.

He repeated it slowly, "Gosh, you look like a billion in that rig."

He got up, slowly, too, and came around the corner of the desk, and put his hands on her shoulders. She could feel their warm smooth heavy pressure through the white muslin of the Dutch dress.

Then suddenly he lifted them from it and shoved his swivel chair to-ward her across the floor.

"Sit down, Bobs, I want to talk to you," he said and faced her.

"Look here," he began, "it's a shame to tell you that they'll let me have this picture. And it's good luck. I think I can work it so that you'll get as much as you can stand—the time we've finished the picture."

Bobbie's toes, inside the wooden pegs she was wearing, curled up with her hands clenched themselves, so that her nails bit her palms, as her tense nervousness shard ha came into her throat. She wanted to shriek with happiness that fairly hurt. A contact! A steady salary! A chance at last, after all these months of sting — waiting — waiting. It seemed too wonderful to be true.

"Gus, Gusty!" she said, "how can I say thanks? You're doing so much for me."

"Well, I am," he cut in quickly "We may as well be sensible about it, and admit the truth, Bobbie. You know, yourself, that you haven't been able to get anywhere by your self in the six months you've been here."

That, of course, was the truth no matter how much it hurt, and Bobbie nodded.

"You know, just as well as I do, that this town's full of girls as pretty, or even prettier, than yourself," Gus' smooth voice ran on. "Looks and brains don't count much when a girl's trying to break into pictures these days. Some time she gets in luck—a stroke of pure luck—but often it's because some man is back of her, pushing her as I'm going to push you."

He reached out for one of her small limp hands, and held it tight in a hot one.

"I can do a lot for you—I can make you if you'll let me. I'm in a position to, now. And if you'll just put yourself into my hands—"

"I will!" Bobbie interrupted him eagerly. "I'll do everything you tell me to do. I'll obey you like a trained seal! Watch me!"

Little did she suspect, as she said it, where that innocent little remark was going to lead her that afternoon.

Gus laughed. "All right, we'll begin today," he said. "Go and jump into your other clothes, and I'll show you just where to start, and how."

Bobbie wondered what he meant, as she took off the blond wig, the white muslin bodice, the blue skirt and the wooden shoes of Dutch Gretchen. In five minutes she was back in the little white sports dress and the tiny felt hat that had been restored and pressed dozens of times in Mrs. Wingan's kitchen so that it always looked fresh and new and oh, so smart.

"Here I am, Gusty, all ready to play Pollyanna leader," she called lightly to MacCloud, as she stepped out.

He was reading the letter on pale gray paper for the second time. But when she came up to him, he stuffed it into his trousers pocket, and got up.

Down the bare wooden stairs they went, arm in arm, locked closer on every step. Then out into the court yard filled with blinding sunlight, and into the dark green roadster. Through the iron gates, and out into Sunset boulevard, crowded with automobiles.

At first Bobbie thought he was heading for Beverly Hills and his own white house. But he turned off suddenly into a quiet little side street, lined with white houses and shaded with pepper trees.

At the very end of it was a tiny private park with a thread-like brook running through it, and facing it was a small white house.

"What a duck of a little house!" Bobbie cried as Gus stopped his car in front of it. Then a terrible thought struck her—perhaps some friends of his lived in it, and perhaps they were going calling on them!

"Oh, Gus, I don't want to go in!" she said, as he got out and opened the door on her side of the car. "Look at me. I'm terrible old hat! And this dress! It's too short, and I've been crying! I can't go visit in—"

"Nobody wants you to, goose," Gus laughed at her. "Come on, and get out. I want to show you this house."

Without stopping to wonder why he wanted to show it to her Bobbie got out of the car and followed him up the flagged walk. Together they went around the little fairy-tale house, peeping in at the windows. The rooms were as quaint as the house itself. They were filled with lovely old fashioned furniture, bright rag rugs, old pewter ware, and flowered chintz curtains.

"It belongs to an artist and his wife who have gone to New York for the Winter," Gus told her.

"I never saw anything so pretty as this in my life!" Bobbie declared as she and Gus leaned over the stone wall, side by side. "If I had a house of my own, I'd want it to be just like this."

Of course, she didn't want a house of her own. Nothing was further from her desire. What she did want, just then, was a career—the career that Gus had just promised to give her, if she would put herself into his hands. A career in pictures. What could be more wonderful! What could ask for at the age of better! A career, as she stood there at the low whispering little brook, in the dreadfully sorry for a house in the world that she would like to live in! A career in order to have a house like this to live in! A career that had to do with houses and rooms and furniture and gardens! Bobbie felt as if she simply must have it! She simply must!

"Gus," she turned wide eyed and flushed upon him, her surprise was written plainly in them, "I've changed my mind. I don't want a career now. I want a house!"

Gus answered her, although the question of her mind had never been brought up. "You'll want to live in a quiet place—a place where you can have your friends, instead of that in my boarding house."

"But I have many friends here," she said. "I don't want to see a lot of people the next few weeks. I want to work every day, and play and sleep, and have hours every night so that I'll look fresh and pepper in front of the camera. I'm going to be a credit to you, Gus. You'll be surprised!" she laughed.

"I'd die of the blue creevies. I'd be so afraid here alone at night anyway!" she added, "with the nearest neighbor on the other side of the park, and that little brook talking to itself—ugh!"

"You could have a housekeeper," he said carelessly, "and I could come, sometimes, and have supper with you. I don't like the idea of your coming up to my house any more. Lottie Schultz does a lot of rubber-necking lately, and there's bound to be nasty talk if you keep on coming."

He took another long look at the friendly little house.

"You know, I get dogzoned lone some some times, Bobbie." His hand rested over hers. "I get lonesome for you. It seems to me that we see each other so little. You have to be home at midnight, always, or Mrs. Mangan will throw a fit—and Lottie Schultz will throw one if we stay up at my house after ten o'clock. I seem always to be saying goodbye to you just when I'm beginning to enjoy myself.

Well, that was true enough, Bobbie thought. Evenings when they were together seemed all too short. It was always time to separate just when they were having the nicest time.

'How Can I Say Thanks?" Bobbie Said to Gus

Her voice came at last, small and suffocated.

"Oh, Gusty!" she said, "how can I say thanks? You're doing so much for me."

"Well, I am," he cut in quickly "We may as well be sensible about it, and admit the truth, Bobbie. You know, yourself, that you haven't been able to get anywhere by your self in the six months you've been here."

Bobbie Discovers Letter Gus Had Been Reading

And yet wasn't it a queer thing for a man to do? To ask a girl to rent a little out-of-the-way house hidden behind the trees of a park, and that he could come to see her?

In the world where Bobbie has been brought up, when a man wanted to see a great deal of a girl he asked her to marry him. It was he—not she—who put the rent of the little house, and the two of them lived in it and kept house.

What was Gus driving at, anyway?

"I don't believe I want to take this house, Gus," she said, deep in thought. "I don't think it would be the thing to do—and the neighbors would think it queer for a girl to be here all alone with just a house keeper."

She remembered how Aunt Gertrude had always been afraid of going to see the Widow Parkins so often. It didn't look right for a girl to go in and out of the house of a man or woman so often, Aunt Gertrude said. And if you remember, Bobbie, it was a most unhappy little hut."

"You don't get me," Gus said suddenly, his face clouding over in troubled ones. "I'm going to do what I tell you to do—and then you tell me to go to the devil—and I'll go. So you'll take this house."

TEMPORARY HARDSHIPS MAY MEAN BRIGHTER FUTURE

There are some wives who hinder the advancement of their husbands because they are unwilling to change their place of residence or are opposed to enduring temporary hardships which would come if the husband accepted some line of duty leading eventually to a large income.

It is admitted that loss of companionship of old friends may mean more to a woman than to a man, but it should not make her refuse to help in her husband's advancement.

There are comparatively few years in a man's life when he can work at full speed and endure the strain of continued hard effort.

It is, then, in the productive years that a man must lay the foundation for comfort and freedom from financial worry in declining years.

If this is not done while a man is vigorous in mind and body it can never be done.

Social position and popularity in a community are fleeting and should have no bearing upon a momentous decision in a man's life. By giving up certain things for a time, he may secure his future on a better plane.

DAILY SHORT STORY

WANTED: A DAUGHTER!

By Louise P. Armystrong

MRS. BARRETT, sitting in a big rocker on the back porch in the sunshine, clicked the crochet needle in and out of the lavender scarf she fashioned, and smiled thoughtfully. Warren was a model son—a little grave perhaps but she rated frivolity in a man. It was fortunate that he showed no inclination for feminine society. Time enough for Warren to think of marriage!

Mrs. Barrett frowned. The little parallel lines of concentration sat ill upon her placid pink and white countenance, fringed with fluffy gold hair that was beginning to whiten at the temples. She was thinking what an unwise thing it is for anyone to marry young. Warren must never make the mistake of tying himself down before he had had a chance to enjoy youth's freedom.

The frown disappeared and with a sigh of contentment she laid down the lavender scarf and dozed in the spring sunshine. It was like a tonic, and she needed it. She must be careful not to overdo—for her heart. She must speak to cook about pastry; those lemon tarts last night were positively tough. Dr. Ames had said she must cut down on sweets and take more exercise! As though she did not get exercise enough as busy as she kept about the house! Mentally, she resolved to go and see the new physician—a specialist from New York, who had just come to town. Dr. Ames was conscientious, but he did not seem to understand her case! And gently rocking in the sunshine Mrs. Barrett drifted into dreams.

She dreamed of the girl next door. They were new people, and Mrs. Barrett who prided herself on conservatism, had not yet called upon them. But she had observed that the girl was rather pretty—a dark-eyed little thing with a merry smile. In her dream the girl came to the garden gate, in a lacy white dress with an armful of flowers.

"That's the dress of a wedding," she gasped as she snapped back into consciousness. Warren had returned from an errand and was standing over her.

"Oh, Warren," she cried in the voice of a frightened child, "I've had such a terrible dream! My heart—"

But Warren laughed tensingly, and tears sprang instantly into his mother's eyes. "I tell you I've a feeling here—an oppression!" She placed a dimpled hand on her ample bosom and [illegible] "I'd thought of going to see that new doctor from New York," she mused.

"Going to try him out, eh?" asked Warren in a queer voice. "Well, here's the medicine Dr. Ames just prescribed before you've even taken a dose—"

"Perhaps I'd better try it," conceded Mrs. Barrett. She took the slim bottle from his hands and eyed it appreciatively. "It may do me good," she said.

"Let's hope so," Warren's cold tone amazed Her.

They went in to luncheon then, and she wondered vaguely at his mood. Warren was usually so thoughtful of her, so concerned.

"Where," she asked, as she poured tea into tall glasses, "shall we go for our vacation this year, Warren?"

He laid down his knife and fork and looked at her gravely. "I cannot afford to take a vacation this year, mother."

"Why, Warren," she objected, "you mustn't think of staying on in this hot town."

"You must go, of course," he replied shortly, "but I'll not be able to."

He set his mouth stubbornly. Well, she wouldn't argue now, later, perhaps.

"Have you met any of the people next door?" she asked pleasantly.

"The Huffs?" he inquired with some interest. "Oh, yes. Met the man, an architect—and his sister who lives with them. I can't say that I like her."

"Oh, Warren, I'm so glad," exclaimed his mother, thinking of the dream. "That is," she added in confusion, "I'm glad you're not paying any attention to girls. I don't want you to marry and settle down early in life, Warren. I want you to be free!"

And Warren looked at her keenly with a curious smile.

It was late in August when Mrs. Barrett returned from the seashore Warren had written he could not meet the train because he was working late. He wrote her to take a taxi and he would see about her luggage next day. But she saw to it herself, stood in the hot sun and conferred with the transfer men so the poor lad would not have to make the long trip up town tomorrow. She felt a little conscience stricken even now to think of having left him—but she had needed the change. Her heart—

She was glad to be back, however, she was always glad to be home.

"Mr. Warren won't be in to dinner," the cook told her as she carried her handbag upstairs. "He's been working late most every night."

"Poor Warren," exclaimed Mrs. Barrett in contrition.

She was lonely without him. After dinner she sat on the front porch to wait his return. Tired out after the trip she was just beginning to doze when a clear voice aroused her. "Mrs. Barrett, I've brought you some roses from our garden"

She started in surprise and looked up to see the girl from next door standing in the moonlight before her, her arms filled with shimmering white blossoms.

"How kind you are, Miss—" Mrs. Barrett's tone was coldly formal. "I'll go right in and put them in water!" Warren must have been making friends with these people, and he had not written her one word about it!

She had not asked the girl to stay, and was amazed to see her perched like a bird on the top step when she returned. "I suppose you and my son are great friends," she ventured as she sat down once more in the willow chair behind the vines.

There was a moment's silence. "No," the girl said, "we're not. I—I liked him at first, but I don't any more!" And she sprang up suddenly and disappeared into the darkness uttering a sob.

Mrs. Barrett now was alarmed. Had her Warren been paying attention to this girl—to any girl? She decided to sit up and wait for her son. She would make him account for every moment of the time while she had been away. She waited a long while. The old clock in the hallway chimed the hour at intervals, and she counted the strokes with growing apprehension. At one o'clock she was almost panic stricken and thinking of phoning the police when she saw a car suddenly stop at the gate. Two men got out, one leaning heavily against the other. Together they came haltingly up the walk.

"Think you can make it, ole top?" a strange voice asked.

"Sure," drawled the voice of Warren!

He was about to mount the steps when his friend caught his arm and said: "Listen, Warren, cut this out! You've taken these drinks deliberately for I watched you! Think of your mother—"

"Think of my mother!" Warren rasped out. "I never think of anyone else—never get a chance! Years and years she's hounded me, driven me! And the worst of it is, she's always talking about my freedom! Freedom! I've never been free to even look at a girl this Summer—and now she's come home to spoil everything!"

Mrs. Barrett, in the sheltering darkness, watched the friend depart as Warren made his way slowly into the house. There was a sharp pain in her heart, but she was not thinking of that organ now—she was thinking of her boy!

At breakfast Warren looked guilty and confused.

"I met little Miss Huff last night," his mother began lightly. "Warren, I wish—"

"Don't ask me to do anything this morning, Mother, please," he begged.

Mrs. Barrett burst into tears. Warren glared at her for a moment. "Well, what is it?" he finally asked in a gentle tone.

"Something I've set my heart on—something I wish for dreadfully, Warren!"

"Well, haven't I always given you what I could?" he demanded.

"Everything but one thing," sobbed little Mrs. Barrett in the depths of anguish. "Warren, why will you be so hard? Don't you know a woman is lonely in a big house with only a man? Warren, I've set my heart on having a daughter-in-law!"

She raised blue eyes to her son's astonished face, eyes like wet pansies after a Summer shower. "A daughter-in-law, Warren," she repeated. "I'd like one small and graceful—with dark hair and deep black eyes—like—well, like—"

The happy light of understanding came suddenly into Warren Barrett's face, though he could only flush and grin awkwardly across the table at his mother.

"All right, old dear," he said. "Suppose I'll have to please you!"

THE MEDITATIONS OF A WIFE

By HELEN ROWLAND

WHY should a woman be better than a man?

• • •

Why should a girl be more selective, more discriminating, more delicate in her love-making?

• • •

These are the questions that every girl is asking today.

• • •

Woman started out to prove that she was as good as a man—but her idea of "equality" seems to be expressing itself in a violent effort to prove that she is entitled to be as BAD as a man. As predaceous in her petting, as predatory in hunting her mate, and sometimes as loud in her swearing.

• • •

It seems to me the answer is all summed up in that long-forgotten French motto — NOBLESSE OBLIGE!

• • •

Why should firemen be braver than other men? Why does a fire man lay down his life to save another's life? There is no law compelling him to do this. Noblesse oblige! Nobility—the nobility of his calling—obliges him to.

• • •

Why are policemen courageous? Why are postmen invariably polite and courteous? Why are diplomats well-bred? Why are soldiers chivalrous?

• • •

Noblesse oblige! Nobody makes them that way. It is their CODE! It is their high regard for THEMSELVES and for their calling!

And by that same token, woman's code should be the code of "Noblesse oblige."

• • •

Woman talks a lot of "feminism" and "superiority" stuff but she doesn't think ENOUGH of herself—and never has! She hasn't enough self-esteem!

• • •

Woman is the Mother of the World! And because of that, she is entitled to set up the moral standards of the world, and to hold man up to her OWN standards rather than to step down to his. Noblesse oblige!

• • •

Woman is the social mentor of the world. In her hands she holds the reins and she can make men toot along to the pace she sets. Man is as bad as woman will let him be and as good as she expects him to be. That's all!

• • •

Woman is the culture, the civilization the love, the beauty of the world. It is up to HER to choose the world's standards in taste, in manners, in love making, in all the finer things of life. Noblesse oblige.

• • •

Woman IS finer than man. More delicate, more fastidious, more discriminating, by nature. There is no law which compels her to prove this, of course. It is merely a case of "noblesse oblige."

• • •

Man thinks a lot of himself. He has the cock-a-doodle-do spirit. He is pretty cocky about being a MAN. But why shouldn't woman be cocky about being a WOMAN?

Just being a woman should inspire a girl with such a high ideal of herself, such regard for herself, such a high valuation of her "calling," that no man could make her disloyal to her own CODE. Noblesse oblige!

• • •

But the more woman prates of her "independence," the meeker and more hysterical she appears to become in her mad desire to please man—by forgetting her code and marking herself down to half-price!

DO YOU KNOW THAT---

Questions asked in Parliament cost on an average not less than thirty shillings each to answer. There may be as many as 120 questions in one day's order paper.

"Every child ought to be encouraged to get out of breath regularly once a day," said a well-known doctor, who advocates blowing hard as one of the best exercises for children, as it broadens the chest.

Maltese dogs, the little white-haired animals so popular as pets in Victorian days, are no longer to be found on their native island.

MEDBURY SAYS---

By JOHN P. MEDBURY.

MEXICAN divorces are so easily obtained nowadays that it's almost a pleasure to get married.

A MAN doesn't have to be afraid of going to the altar. The most he can lose is his time.

ANY fellow who commits bigamy is lazy.

IN Sonora all the ministers are tying slip-knots.

THIS is the city that only has one ground for divorce: Marriage.

YOU don't need any reasons.

A HUSBAND or wife is a dandy excuse.

SO far, the courts haven't been giving them to single people.

BUT a bachelor applied for one the other day. He said it would be a good thing to keep around the house.

IN New York City the laws are so strict that a wedding ring is harder to get out of than a pair of handcuffs.

WHEN a bride and groom go to the altar in that State they're married so tight that they make the Siamese twins look like a couple of hermits.

IT'S so difficult for attorneys to obtain legal separations for their clients that a lot of lawyers are using nitroglycerine.

A POUND of dynamite will do in a minute what it would take six months to accomplish in Reno.

BUT Mexico can do a quicker job and a neater one.

A GUY can be engaged in the morning, married in the afternoon and be paying alimony before dark.

THE decrees must be good because the same people keep going back all the time.

ONE man has left a standing order with the judge.

HE'S automatically divorced every April.

CONNUBIAL division is the hardest arithmetic problem in the world. Millionaires get their separation in Paris, the middle class goes to Mexico to be divided and the poor people have to stay married.

Last night was as good as tonight is going to be. When we have a set to sell we are going to pick out a night, which like last night, has plenty of stations with good quality and volume.

Our radio friend in apartment houses and other places where reception is not supposed to be excelled by have just picked up "Happy Morris," WOY, KDKA, WAIU, and WPG. These stations were exceptionally strong at 8:30 when the time signals above WNAC seemed weak. Perhaps it was because the good program on 430 metres made further search unnecessary.

The Taubman speeders made their initial bow, or whatever it is radio entertainers do. Plenty of variety, a new kind of atmosphere, and an entertaining group of announcers gave this program the right to have the best hour of the evening.

RADIO-DIALOG

By WILLIAM RADER

TONIGHT on the air are enough attractions to keep us all home. We're going to listen to WBZ's transmission of the Boston Symphony Orchestra. The reputation and performances of this group rate so highly that aspersions on New York has sagarity taken this program. Instead of treating us disdainfully, as an inferior, WJZ is glad to get this broadcast.

If your antennas is agreeable this may also be picked up from KDKA.

Perhaps you are a follower of WNAC. When radiations of the Hawthorne Four start at 8:00 tonight Estenders will enjoy a popular program.

If the Four does not start right on the hour, wait a minute. WNAC has an assortment of offices, studios, halls and radio rooms that would do credit to WEAF. So when a visitor starts looking around, it is easy to get lost. Sometimes someone does and then the program is a minute late. But that's not often.

Early in the evening WEEI will start clamoring for attention with a New York feature, Commander Kinsman, U. S. N., is going to say something about the New York-Paris flight. Whether you are going to fly with him or not, will make no difference to him. He will expose all the secrets of navigation in an instant.

Something entirely new will be the Pickwick Hour. Mr. Pickwick is best known to newcomers for sealing as the gentleman who sanctions a good glass occasionally. So do we, but let gets that straight.

FOCH REVIEWS ALLIES' WORK

Marshal Foch's Own Story of the World War, as it is being printed in the Boston Sunday Advertiser, begins with all the "suspense" appeal of a mystery story. The first instalment, which appeared on Sunday last, formally lifts the famous military strategist's narrative down to the moment when, following the abatement of the German drive at St. Quentin, it was decided to place Foch in supreme command of the Allied armies.

This is the "inside" story of some of the most momentous hours of the greatest conflict of arms in the history of the world. Foch's narrative was related to Bernard Deaouches (Jaques offices) for the French Army and the American Air Service. It was revised by Major De Mierry, one of the Marshal's staff officers.

Advance orders for tomorrow's Boston Sunday Advertiser from now on every section of Greater Boston testify to the importance intelligent readers place upon the news to be revealed for the first time by one of the great military geniuses of the age.

PERMANENT LICENSING OF RADIO TO START JUNE 1

Washington, April 16 (I.N.S.).—Issuance of permanent Federal radio broadcasting licenses probably will be started about June 1.

That the commission is endeavoring partially to iron out congested conditions, force American broadcasters off the crowded wave channels and to eliminate "odd frequency" waves adopted by many stations, is known to all. Issuance of the temporary wave length allocation are anticipated before permanent licenses are issued. Fall undoubtedly 75 per cent. of the interstation interference will have been eliminated.

AVIATOR QUITS SEARCH FOR MISSING EXPLORERS

Nome, Alaska, April 16 (A.P.).—Alger Graham, aviator of the Wilkins Arctic expedition, has left Point Barrow, on west coast of Alaska, presumably without finding any trace of Captain George H. Wilkins and Sen Eilson, Arctic explorers missing since last August when they left Barrow, March 29, on a flight over the Arctic north of Alaska.

Save the Forests!

But DON'T Condemn the Smoker Unless You Have the FACTS

The men who make a business of fire-fighting in the towns and smaller cities of New England know what causes the grass and forest fires which are to be looked for in a dry April and you will observe that THEY are not blaming either the smoking motorist or his cigarette.

In South Auburn, R. I., a "ragpicker dumped inflammable material in a wooded lot and set fire to several acres of dry brush land."

The forest fire which has swept more than 6,000 acres of Eastern Long Island is reported to have been caused by the "attempt of a nine-year-old boy to smoke out a skunk."

In Scituate, R. I., Fire Warden Everett A. Dexter issues notice that "until after a heavy rain no permits for burning brush will be issued."

Fire Chief Graham, of Wakefield, Mass., announces that "permits for setting fires" will be cancelled until further notice, or until such time as a substantial amount of rain shall have fallen.

The lawn specialists of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, who know what to expect at this season, are out with a timely warning that burning is injurious to lawns. The common idea has been that a Spring burning is good for a lawn. The specialists say no.

So far the firemen and the experts, and not a word about the cigarette.

The Boston Evening American does not say that fires are not caused by careless smokers, and by cigars and cigarettes carelessly thrown away.

They can be and they ARE—sometimes.

With the facts as we know them to be, however—leaves, grass and brush extremely dry after weeks of clear, cold weather, men and boys engaged in burning them—it will be just as well not to join in the Old Aunty Everything chorus of "No Smoking."

Commissioner of Conservation Bazeley would like to see "an ash receiver in every automobile, in order that cigarette and cigar stubs might be placed in these instead of tossed out upon the roadside."

Respectfully recommended to ALL motorists who smoke.

Failing the ash receiver, cigars, cigarettes and matches should be CAREFULLY EXTINGUISHED BEFORE BEING THROWN AWAY.

CHILDREN SHOULD NOT BE PERMITTED TO HAVE MATCHES OR BURN RUBBISH WITHOUT OLDER PERSONS TO SUPERVISE THEM.

If you live in the country, and decide that now is the time to burn over the old woodlot, be sure there are men enough on the job to keep the fire from "getting away."

The week after next will be American Forest Week. Do some planting.

Unsanitary Water Supply

They Like It and Cling to It

WATER SUPPLY IN GOATSKINS FOR THE CITY OF HEBRON

In the distance you see part of the old city of Hebron, in Mesopotamia, "between the rivers" in Asia. In the foreground you see hundreds of goatskins, filled with water, lying out in the blazing sun, waiting to be distributed in the city.

The water was none too pure to start with, and you can imagine what it is like after lying in the hot sun inside skins of goats before being delivered to the consumers.

The natives are USED TO IT, and resent any foolish suggestion about putting in pipes and having a sanitary water supply.

YOU may not be able to sympathize with them, but many fundamentalists might do so easily.

It is difficult to give up that to which you are accustomed, even if it is foolish.

Before you blame dwellers in Hebron for sticking to their water supply in goatskins, think of the highly civilized American ladies that insist on high heels that endanger their lives and injure their health, and that until recently insisted on tight corsets that squeezed their little livers and all their internal apparatus.

EASTER TELLS US TO HOPE ON

By DR. FRANK CRANE

THE most remarkable phenomenon in the universe is the coming again to life of dead vegetation.

When the earth warms up in the Spring the leaves unfold, the grass greens and the flowers bloom. It is symbolical to races in the temperate zone of the regeneration of life.

It is but natural, therefore, that mankind should have some sort of festival to celebrate this renewing.

The accepted festival in Christendom is Easter time which probably borrows its origin from pagan countries.

But no matter where it began and no matter how it is christianized, it appeals to humanity.

Its lesson is that life is eternal.

From things that were apparently dead come new things. The dead die and seed germinates under proper conditions.

No matter how long life has lain dormant there is in it the seed of future life.

Seeds have been found in the possession of Egyptian mummies which when planted can produce new flowers.

Mankind faces the future. The resurrection and the future life always float before us. It is the unextinguishable belief of the human race that life shall continue; how and where we know not.

That the dead remain forever gone and spent is repugnant to our instincts.

Mountains are eroded and seas dry up. Everything in nature decays. But what nature teaches is not only the sad lesson of universal death and its sway, but it has that other lesson of the universal coming to life again. This is the lesson that nature teaches us in the Easter season.

There is always hope, therefore it springs eternal in the human breast and it is just as verdant when we stand by the closed grave of our loved ones as it is when we stand by the cradle of our infant.

Easter is as if there were a blast from the trumpet of the Eternal which tells us to hope on, struggle on, for a thing is not quickened except it die, says the apostle, and out of the dead of the old the dead brings the germ of life for the new.

BOSTON DAY BY DAY

UNIQUE.

DURING the recent annual encampment of Massachusetts Department, G. A. R., JOEL A. HAYWARD, of Blossom street, Fitchburg, used an interesting black walnut cane to get about. This walking stick was made from wood cut on Lookout Mountain during the Civil War. By looking through a peep-hole 1-16th of an inch in diameter a picture called "Battle of Lookout Mountain" is revealed.

KNOWS.

No one can pull the wool over the eyes of DISTRICT CHIEF CORNELIUS J. O'BRIEN of the BOSTON Fire Department when it comes to property along the waterfront. According to men who serve under the veteran, he knows "every plank in every building by its first name." For many years CHIEF O'BRIEN has had the dangerous waterfront for his battleground. The fact that fires in that neighborhood seldom reach big proportions, according to the "bucks," is because the chief is so well acquainted with his district.

DISCOVERED.

The mystery surrounding the disappearance of eggs laid by black ducks at FRANKLIN PARK has been solved. One of the caretakers at the BIRD HOUSE discovered a peacock eating one of the eggs. At first it was thought that rats might have been responsible for the losses.

ACTIVE.

Many of the men who were of the retinue of THOMAS W. LAWSON, financier and "copper king," have slipped into the background since his death, but CHARLES MARCH of MEDFORD, his former private secretary, is not of this number. CHARLIE is rapidly becoming a leading figure in Greater Boston realty circles. He still finds time to spend with his chow dogs.

LISTEN, WORLD!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

ARE you a water-strider?

Remember the skinny, long-legged little bugs that used to go scooting over the ponds when you were a kid? You'd watch them for hours, wondering how they managed to scoot on top of the water without ever dipping beneath its glassy surface. "Gosh! How you wish you could be a water-strider!"

Well, maybe you are one!

H. G. Wells says that most folks are. He has some mean things to say about water-strider people. Mr. ..ells calls these little bugs "water-boatmen," as they do in England, and he compares his charming heroine to one of them in one of his works. All red-headed young ladies of frivolous nature kindly pay attention—

"Clementina has a mind like one of those water insects that never get below the surface of anything. Water-boatmen they are called, and they flicker about sustained by surface tension. She just flickers about. She professes an affection for me that is altogether monstrous and she knows no more about my substantial self than the water-boatman knows of the deeps of the pond. She knows as little about the world.

"Why is a person with so quick an intelligence and such wise instincts as Clementina mentally superficial? Why does she habitually dismiss three-quarters of human concerns as uninteresting? Is it some sort of mental economy? For gossip, excursions, household matters and making love, Clementina has an abundant, swift, penetrating and indefatigable intelligence. But she will not even look at the frame work in which such things are set and which is continually affecting and determining things!

"For Clementina there is apparently no thread of human interest in economics—that is to say, in the toil, payment, enslavement or liberation of scores or millions of human beings. . . . Geology, of course, means nothing to her but 'old rocks'; paleontology nothing but 'old bones.' It is inconceivable to her that any one should be interested in theology. Sociology makes her impatient, and politics rude. Yet . . . she can still muse pleasantly before a hat shop window. That she feels, is 'life.' As surely as biology isn't. And with her flitting glance, she is just a sample of general readers everywhere. They do not care whence they came nor whither they go nor what they are doing. They just flicker about. They will be water-boatmen till the stream dries up."

Have you a water-boatman mind?

Do you "just flicker about," always absorbed in your petty, personal pleasures and problems, never thinking of the depths of the life that sustains you?

What's the aim of your life? Do you want to be happy and successful, and are you content if no tragedy touches you or yours, and if you succeed in your efforts?

Do you rebel at the injustice which doesn't happen to afflict you?

Do you dream of and work for a possible social reformation?

What do you think of as you pass along the street? Are you like Clementina, mainly absorbed in hat shops or other personal projects—or are you looking into the eyes which you meet and wondering what lies behind them? Are you touched by their sorrow, inspired by their strength, moved by their curiosity, appalled by their ignorance?

Do you live into life or do you flicker about on the top?

Think it over.

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By ALINE MICHAELIS

SOMETIMES at night within my quiet room (the clock's loud "tick," the only sound I hear) when light of shaded lamps backs the gloom of firelight's dancing shadows drawing near, across the open book upon my knees old memories walk, a gay and gracious train; they bring me back youth's golden pageantries and all the starry bliss of love again. They are so bright they quite obscure the page of dry and dusty learning which I read; they are so dear, their coming can assuage my spirit's loneliness, my and heart's need. Sometimes at night within my quiet room the long years flicker out, a tale that's told, while memories bring old loveliness to bloom and all the raptures of the past unfold.
